CHARGES BIG FIRE WAS SET

Deputy Chief Neal and District Officer Grady of the State Police to-day began a rigid investigation of the mysterious $1,000,000 fire that destroyed the Park Square Auto station, with its contents of about 350 automobiles, and partially burned the old Boston & Providence railroad station.

"The fire looks suspicious to me," said Deputy Neal. "It strikes me as very strange that it should have gained such headway before being discovered. If we get evidence that will warrant an arrest it will be made and the case will be pushed to the limit."

Christopher Whitney, manager of the auto station, is convinced that the big blaze was of incendiary origin.

Second Fire To-day.

A second fire started in the ruins to-day, through the ignition of a small can of gasoline, and for a time great excitement prevailed among the firemen and the spectators.

The flames from the blazing fluid shot up into the air to a height of twenty feet or more, causing great fear lest some greater explosion might occur. Members of Ladder Company No. 17 and Engine Company No. 22, who were ordered to remain at the fire for just such extra blazes, quickly extinguished the fire.

Gathering as many facts as they could about the big blaze, the police began a search to-day for a possible firebug. Men employed about the place were questioned as to any recent discharges in the place. They were asked if any enmity had been expressed toward the manager and if they had seen any suspicious person or persons lurking about the place.

Site for City Hall?

The big station building and the freight shed were the property of the New Haven railroad. Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven road, said:

"It is not at all probable that the New Haven road will rebuild these structures. Why should they be rebuilt inasmuch as we have been trying for a number of years to sell the property?"

When President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine was questioned concerning this talk, he said:

"Although it is a bit early to discuss the future of any place that is not through burning, it is safe enough to say there will never be a railroad station on that site."

"I advocate the Park square site for our new City Hall," said Mayor George A. Hibbard, when asked to-day his opinion as to the best disposition of this central location. "I shall at once take up the matter with the New Haven road. There are 200,000 square feet of land. This would give room for a new City Hall, large and modern in every way.

"The only question is whether or not a satisfactory price could be fixed with the railroad."

Safety fire improvements had just been made in the place. The blaze started just as the night shift was making way for the day shift—about 5:30 Sunday morning—in the extreme southerly end of the shed. Mr. Whitney does not think it could have been caused by an improperly insulated wire.

"Not Caused by Boiler."

It has been suggested that the fire may have been caused by an overheated boiler. Mr. Whitney is not of this belief. Here is what he said to-day to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I have asked the police to make a thorough investigation of the cause of the fire to-day. It seems very peculiar to me that the fire should have occurred at the time of day and the place it did. The blaze was discovered at the extreme southerly end of the shed, and just at the time when the night shift was being relieved by the day force.

"Only last week we had completed making extensive repairs on the building, and we were assured by the Board of Underwriters after they had made a complete tour of the building, that it was in first class condition.

"It was rewired throughout, and I should think that this would have eliminated the theory that the fire was caused by crossed wires."

On account of the exact number of automobiles destroyed not being known yet and on account of the differing values of the cars it is difficult to estimate the damage. But $1,000,000 is regarded as a conservative estimate. The principal loss falls on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, which had $30,000 insurance on the Park Square station structure, and on the underwriting agency known as London Lloyd's of London, England, which carried risks on the auto property.

It is considered doubtful if the old Providence station structure is rebuilt to any extent. Vice-President T. E. Byrnes of the New Haven road is quoted as saying that it probably would not be rebuilt.

WOODBURY SUICIDE BY SHOOTING

NOTED "BEAUTY DOCTOR" WAS HARASSED BY PROSECUTION AND ARRESTED FOR LIBEL.

John H. Woodbury, the "beauty doctor," who has offices in Boston, New York, and other large cities of the United States, and whose face has been advertised in all of the principal publications of the world, shot and killed himself to-day at his home at Sea Cliff, Coney Island.

Leased wire dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN say that he shot himself in the head with a revolver while he was lying in bed. Damage suits that had been brought against him and trouble with the County Medical Society are given as the cause of his act.

Sued For $50,000.

One of the suits that was brought against him was by Stephen A. Emmons, a contractor, who sued him for $50,000. His friends said to-day that they had noticed that he had been in low spirits for some time, brooding over his troubles, they thought, but that he had given no intimation that he contemplated taking his own life.

Woodbury's Dermatological Institute went into bankruptcy last September on the petition of the Andrew Jergens Company of Cincinnati, from whom he had bought more than $18,000 worth of perfume within the past six years, for which he had not paid.

The company was organized by John H. Woodbury in 1890. Although it was capitalized at only $1,000, through extensive advertising it became widely known and did a big business. Woodbury got out of the original concern about two years ago and set up an opposition place.

Then the New York County Medical Society got after the concern on the ground that he advertised to practise medicine, whereas he wasn't a physician. A fight in the courts on this question resulted in defeat for those connected with the Woodbury Institute and they were fined $1,000 each.

Arrested Last Night.

Woodbury was arrested on January 14 in his home on a warrant obtained from Justice Maddox in the Brooklyn County Court by Emmons. Emmons brought suit against Woodbury for $50,000 damages, charging the dermatologist with having slandered him in calling him publicly, "Liar, crook and thief."

The men have had strained relations for several months over business matters and three civil suits brought by Emmons against Woodbury are now proceeding in Brooklyn Court.

Two men from the sheriff's office, accompanied by Emmons, waited for Woodbury last night, and when he made his appearance in the Seacliff Inn, which he owns, arrested him. They took him to the county court building, where he was at once released on a bail bond offered by William Hennessy, a hotel man of the Coney Island section.

Woodbury owns much real estate in that territory, while Emmons does much of the contracting business there. He did some work for Woodbury, and he alleges did not pay him the price agreed upon, there being something like $7,000 involved in their dispute. The so-called slander occurred while the men were arguing over this.

FILES BILL TO ABOLISH CITY COUNCIL

Representative Myron E. Pierce filed in the House to-day a bill to abolish the Boston Common Council. Pierce comes from Ward 11, the "silk stocking" ward of Boston. He is a Republican.

The plan of abolishing the lower branch of the Boston city government will also be treated in the coming report of the Boston Finance Commission, which is to be submitted to the Legislature in a few weeks.

Boston affairs this Winter will be considered, as usual, by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs. A majority of this committee favors the Pierce bill.

The Common Council itself is against it. It will send a committee to oppose the bill before the committee. Many Boston politicians outside of the council will probably protest the bill also.

POLICEMAN ON TIME! HE SEES SHOOTING

Donato Matnarolli was arrested in Salem street early to-day just as he was shooting at a man who was fleeing down the street, according to Reserve Policeman Murphy of Hanover street station. In arresting Matnarolli, Murphy lost the other man. Matnarolli, who refuses to talk about the case, was held in $300 by Judge Bolster in Boston Municipal Court to-day for continued hearing on January 21.

CITY MAY PURCHASE PERKINS INSTITUTE

Representative Thomas F. Coogan will file in the Legislature to-morrow a bill to authorize the city of Boston to purchase the site and buildings of the Perkins Institute for the Blind in South Boston to erect a municipal building for a district court, public library and other municipal purposes.

$5,000 FOR WATER NEWS.

A bill providing for an investigation by the United States Geological Survey of the water resources of the Commonwealth and a determination of the best method of securing their economic development was filed in the Legislature to-day by George F. Swain. The bill carries an appropriation of $5,000.

VISITOR OF KELLEHERS IS MISSING

The detectives of Somerville and Cambridge to-day began a search for a mysterious man who called upon Mrs. Mary Kelleher in the East Cambridge jail, was admitted and had a long talk with her, three days after her arrest for arson, in their efforts to clear the mystery that shrouds the death of her daughter Catherine, who was a victim of poison.

The detectives did not learn until to-day of the visit of this man. He declared to the jail officials that he was a relative of Mrs. Kelleher, and as she was not under suspicion in the poison mystery at that time, he was admitted and his name was not taken.

It is believed now that if he could be located he could tell something about at least part of the $4,000 Mrs. Kelleher received in insurance from the six deaths that took place in her family within the past three years.

When the jail officials were asked to-day about the man none of them could remember him distinctly, but they recalled the fact of his visit. He is the only relative, or person purporting to be a relative, they said, who had called upon the woman since her arrest. The man was dressed in dark clothing and was of medium height. He looked as though he might be a workingman.

Examiners Get Report.

District Attorney Higgins at his office to-day said that he would take no further action on the case until he got a further report from the police.

It was learned this afternoon that Medical Examiners Swan of Cambridge and Durrell of Somerville have the report of Professor Whitney of Harvard on the three other bodies exhumed, and know now whether or not poison was administered. They refused to make any statement. Chief Perry of the Somerville police said he did not care to say whether a report has been filed or not.

Back of the death by poison of Mrs. Kelleher's twelve-year-old daughter Catherine, the police have reason to believe, was a carefully worked out plan which resulted in the poisoning of the five other members of the family who died under similar circumstances to those of the girl.

That the poison project of the conspirators, which had the payment of death insurance as its incentive, contemplated victims outside of the Kelleher family, the police suspect.

Chief of Police Robert R. Perry of

C. P. TAFT IS THE LIBEL PLAINTIFF

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—It became known to-day that in the libel action brought in the name of the United States Government against the Press Publishing Company of New York (New York World) subpoenas for which were issued Saturday afternoon, the real prosecutors are Charles P. Taft, brother of the President-elect, and Douglas Robinson, brother-in-law of the President.

It is expected that they will be called by the grand jury to present their testimony on the alleged falsity of the charges that they were interested in the proceeds of the sale of the Panama canal property.

The suit is brought under a provision of the District of Columbia code. The section governing the action reads as follows:

"Whoever publishes a libel shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or both. Any publication of a libel shall be justified, if it appears that the matter charged as libelous was true and was published with good motives for justifiable ends."

The general federal statutes contain no provisions on the subject of libel.

Discussing the case to-day, Representative Raines of Illinois, one of the prominent lawyers of the House, said:

"Without investigating the matter to any special degree, I would say without hesitation that such a suit could not possibly be maintained. I am surprised to learn that any law officer of the Government has advised such a suit."

May Subpoena Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt is wondering to-day whether he has not started a spark that will blow his African hunting trip into smithereens. It is hinted that in the event of indictments being returned, Theodore Roosevelt, as a private citizen after March 4, will be summoned as a witness. Service could be had upon the President the moment he quits the White House and he could not escape testifying.

The grand jury began its investigation this morning, first examining Jerry A. Mathewson, one of the local correspondents of the New York Sun. Later Charles Willis Thompson, manager of the Washington bureau of the New York World at the time of the publication in question, was called.

Both Charles P. Taft and Douglas Robinson, the principals in the World accusations, arrived here to-day under subpoena to go before the grand jury. Both called first at the White House and conferred with the President.

Call Taft To-morrow.

Following his conference with the President, Mr. Taft stated that he would appear before the district grand jury to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Taft stated that the summons was a surprise to him. He said he had discussed the matter briefly with President Roosevelt, but he was unable to give information as to the purpose of the investigation.

"Were you asked to bring any copies of your newspaper with you?" he was asked.

"It is not my newspaper that is in question," he replied with some seriousness.

WOOTON FIGHTS BRIBE VERDICT IN HIGH COURT

Isaac E. Wooton, former president of the Lowell Water Board, fought for liberty before the highest court in the State to-day, his counsel arguing that he could not legally be imprisoned, fined or deprived of the future right of holding public office as a lower tribunal had decided.

Wooton was convicted a year ago of accepting a bribe and sentenced to three months in jail or $500 fine, and was to be debarred forever from holding public office.

Before the full bench of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Chief Justice Knowlton presiding, Attorneys George R. Swassey and William P. Thompson, Boston, argued that the sentence could not legally be enforced because the Water Board had not been legally organized when Wooten was its president, and he could not be convicted under the bribery act.

District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex County argued against this contention. Decision was reserved. Wooton is at liberty on bail.

HOUSE REFUSES TO HEAR SPEAKER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 18. — One of the most extraordinary incidents in the history of Congress occurred to-day when the House stopped Representative William Willett, Democrat, of New York, in the midst of a savage attack on President Roosevelt.

Representative Gardner of Massachusetts made the point of order that Millett was traducing the President of the United States and was thus out of order. By a vote of 126 to 78 he was sustained, Millett being thus deprived of the floor.

Not in years has Congress listened to such a vitriolic speech as that which Representative Willett essayed, and probably no such bitter, personal attack on a President was ever made.

Among his more picturesque designations for the chief magistrate were: Gargoyle, tyrant, pigmy descendant of Dutch tradespeople, horse-tedder, fountain of billingsgate, imitation of a king, a bogus hero.

"We strong-hewed and keen-figuring Americans," said Willett in beginning, "are a people patient to the point of pestilence, negligent to the point of nausea, self-confident to the very border of slavery, and saved from pestilence, nausea and slavery alike, only by a universal sense of honor.

"A candidate for Mayor of New York, running third, with Henry George second.

"A police commissioner, searing the members of the force with Sherlock Holmes exits, entrances, and perambulations.

"An assistant Secretary of the Navy, knifing his high-minded chief in the back.

"A warrior alone in Cuba, saved at San Juan Hill by black soldiers.

"A signer of an insubordinate round robin which any dignified War Department would have punished with summary court-martial.

"Beneficiary of Assassination."

"A candidate for Governor of New York; victorious by a mere fluke, when the false halo of San Juan Hill was above his head.

"A nominee for Vice-President against his will.

"The beneficiary of assassination, and last and crowning piece of luck, the nominee for President, when all the aggressive elements of the opposition wanted to see their own candidate defeated, the mammoth jocularity has got a laugh with every appearance; the gargoyle has been funny from the hour it left its native quarry.

"To such a people, it must be confessed, a chief magistrate who has himself no sense of humor, moving like a horse-tedder over the hay field of American activities, stirring up every drying blade of once green grass, to let it fall drier than before; quarreling one day with the practical politicians, then with the part-your-hair-in-the-middle performers, then with the Socialists, then with the great industrial corporations; wrestling in agony of spirit with Noah Webster and our glorious English tongue; taking a fall out of nature fakers; exhorting our women to avoid race suicide—cannot be an unmixed nuisance.

"He plays the tyrant, to be sure, but he is a tyrant who fears the carnival tickler. He sees things that have a bad smell, but the fresh breeze of Capitol Hill does not let the odor linger.

"He tries our patience, but he is always good—to laugh at. Thank Heaven for things that make us laugh. Without them we might easily become raw, untamed Anglo-Saxons, making much of Magna Charta, bellowing about an effete bill of rights, or even ready to fight for freedom of thought, freedom of speech and freedom of the press, as did our uncivilized ancestors at Lexington and Bunker Hill.

Lashed Horse of Young Girl.

"The beginnings of the mammoth jocularity, which has driven dull care away for more than seven years, the imposing gargoyle, grinning above the entrance of national temple of place and power, have humor all their own.

"A cowboy in his youth, he has never altogether grown out of that.

"An unimaginable Assemblyman, with preposterous notions in his early manhood.

"He boasts of Irish blood," continued Willett, "but no historic Irishman would have treated an ally as he treated Mr. Harriman.

"He exults in a strain of the old Huguenot, but the Irish gentleman does not fly into a passion or lash the horse of a timid young girl, whose only offence is inadvertently passing the royal party in a public highway.

"Hear what this fountain of billingsgate has said of his predecessors in that high office:

"To such a people, it must be confessed, a chief magistrate who has himself no sense of humor, moving like a horse tedder over the hayfield of American activities, stirring up every drying blade of once green grass, to let it fall drier than before; quar-

ANDERSON OUT OF RACE FOR HEAD OF BOARD

"If I vote for any Republican Alderman for chairman I will vote for you."

The above statement, made at City Hall by one of the Democratic members of the Board of Aldermen to Alderman Walter Ballantyne in the presence of several witnesses, is the nearest that any of the Democratic members have come to committing himself to the candidacy of any of the Republicans in the chairmanship contest of the board.

Alderman Ballantyne did not care to state whether or not he would eventually be a candidate for chairman, but it is understood that after to-day's meeting of the board, Alderman George P. Anderson, who is the nominee of the Republican caucus and who has received the solid support of the members of his party in the board up to this time, will withdraw and permit the nomination of some other candidate who might be able to attract a Democratic vote.

Both Aldermen Cotton and Ballantyne are anxious to test their strength in the full board and Anderson's withdrawal will give them the desired opportunity.

The Democrats are hopelessly deadlocked. Alderman Curley's four votes will remain with him and neither Attridge or O'Hare will support him. The board will not organize this afternoon nor is there any immediate prospect of it organizing for some time.

HOME RULE SUNDAY LAWS.

Representative Samuel Holman of Attleboro will file a bill to-morrow in the House of Representatives providing that voters shall decide by ballot whether their city or town shall observe the State laws concerning the observance of the Lord's Day.

386 PURE-FOOD CULPRITS.

The State Board of Health obtained 386 convictions for violations of the "pure food and drugs" law in the fiscal year ending November 30, 1908 according to its annual report filed to-day with the Legislature. Fines for violations amounted to $8,300.30.

BOSTON GIVEN PUREST MILK, SAY FARM MEN

Purer milk is supplied to metropolitan Boston now than ever before in the history of the city, according to the statement made to-day by Peter M. Harwood of the Massachusetts State Dairy Bureau at the convention of the Co-operative Milk Producers' Company of Boston, at the American House.

This is true, the speaker said, in spite of the fact that there were 7,000 fewer quarts of milk used during last year than the year before. The reason for this falling off, he said, was a lack of confidence in the purity of the milk by the public.

"The movement for purer butter, cream and milk, which began ten years ago," said Mr. Harwood, "had caused an increase in the consumption of 2,000,000 pounds of butter a year more, while the demand for cream had doubled. The falling off has been only in the raw milk demand.

"The greatest problem that is confronting the farmers of New England and the public to-day," said Mr. Abbott, "is the influx of foreigners and their occupation of the farms. It is necessary to keep up the standard of cleanliness that the former occupants of the farms had reached, and this takes constant watching.

"The health of our people and the welfare of the nation demand this. The newspapers can be of the greatest use in helping the fight for pure dairy products, and we shall have to rely upon them to assist us."

There were about 200 members present. Stanley A. Abbott presided.

LAW TO KEEP TAB ON BOSTON'S MAYOR

A bill to require the Mayor of Boston and the city auditor to keep a complete public record of all their official acts, record of each act to be entered within twenty-four hours after performance, was filed in the Legislature to-day by Representative Myron E. Pierce of Ward 11, Boston. Representative Pierce recently tried to get information concerning salary increases from the city auditor, who, he says, declined to give him the information without an order from the Mayor. The Mayor, he says, refused the order.

HOTEL MAN'S WIFE TELLS OF DEATH THREATS

In the divorce court to-day Mrs. Mabel G. Johnson told Judge Fessenden that her husband, William A. Johnson, who she said was manager of the Hotel Langham in the South End, had abused her and thrown her out of her house and had failed to support her and her children. The case had been in the uoctrs be rofedn,a rdlu had been in the courts before, and the principal question to-day was as to the amount of alimony and the custody of three children.

"We were married in June, 1897, in New York, and came to Boston and went to live at the Hotel Langham," she said. "We have had five children, two of whom died. Shortly after our marriage my husband began to drink heavily and to beat me. The climax came when, after having gone housekeeping in Rutland street, he came home and struck me with a stove lifter over the head. Then he threw myself and the children out if the house. Two of my children are now with my parents in New Jersey and the youngest is with me. I am now keeping a house and letting rooms. He often threatened to kill me."

Priscilla H. Burnett, who was maid and servant to Mrs. Johnson, corroborated the testimony, especially with regard to the night when Mr. Johnson attacked Mrs. Johnson and ordered them all out of the house.

"Mrs. Johnson and I had been out and when we got home I went to the kitchen, and then I heard a rumpus. I asked Mrs. Johnson what was the matter and she told me that she had just got a beating from Mr. Johnson. Then he came and hit me in the nose. I got a baseball bat that I had under the bed and started at him. Then she ran between me and him and wouldn't let me hit him.

Henry G. Eics of 33 Rutland street testified to Mrs. Johnson and Miss Burnett and the children coming to his house. He said that there were marks on Mrs. Johnson's neck and face at the time. At a subsequent time, he said, when Johnson and Mrs. Johnson were conversing at the door he heard Johnson make a theat to kill Mrs. Johnson.

Counsel for Johnson stated to the court that his client was at present employed at the Hotel Langham, but was receiving inly $15 per month. Counsel for Mrs. Johnson said that he understood from the hotel people that Johnson was receiving that amount as a part of his salary until such time as he had worked out an obligation that he owed the hotel.

It was decided to wait to hear from the hotel people before deciding as to the alimony question.

ARMY OF 2,800 CLEARING SNOW FROM STREETS

Superintendent Emerson put 3,000 extra men at work removing the snow this morning, and these with the regular city force of 800 and about 1,000 employed by the Boston elevated made an army of 2,800. They made rapid progress especially in the congested downtown streets, and were aided by the rising temperature. The city had over 100 teams at work, and the railroad about as many more.

Early in the day the snow shovelled good and was comparatively dry to handle for which the men on the job were extremely thankful. They dug gutters along the curb stones and by noon little rivulets of melting snow were rapidly carrying off the puddles to corner manholes and into sewers.

The street car company had kept 150 snow ploughs in constant operation from the beginning of the fall, which did not go over four inches. These piled the snow in great windrows along the track, and in the narrow streets the men were saved the work of piling it, merely shovelling from these rows into carts.

One man was reported to have frozen to death in his doorway. He was William J. Noonan, a lodger at No. 33 Milford street. Another, John Flynn, homeless, was found dying in the doorway of Engine 3 in Harrison avenue. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he died in a short time. The physicians said he had starved and frozen to death.

Shipping in the harbor was seriously handicapped, but by noon to-day normal Winter conditions were restored.

One Way To Avoid Piles and Appendicitis.

"Every incoming patient recites the same story—neglected or improperly treated constipation. The great increase of operations for appendicitis, rectal diseases and womanly displacements, indicates the crying need of a mild but sure treatment for constipation," says a well-known hospital matron. "Headache, stomach troubles, piles and all the fevers of children can be prevented by using this mild formula whenever any costiveness exists: Get at any well stocked drug store 'one ounce aromatic fluid cascara,' 'one ounce compound essence cardiol,' and 'two ounces aromatic syrup rhubarb.' Mix, and adults take from ½ to 2 teaspoonfuls after each meal, while children will readily take from five drops to a teaspoonful after each meal, according to age. This treatment will correct the bowels and not drug them. The longer it is used the less need of it except when some heavy meal is consumed or when one catches cold."

"Most druggists keep these ingredients on hand. If they cannot be readily procured the Prescription Products Co., Dayton, Ohio, who prepare guaranteed extracts, essences, etc., especially for prescription filling, will doubtless supply them."

To reach Wolf's "My Clothier," cor. Hanover and Portland streets, by the Washington street tunnel, passengers going south should leave at Friend street exit; those going north at Union street.

NEW CLUES IN KELLEHER POISON CASE

Somerville had a conference with Lieutenant Carter and Inspector Damery today as a result of the information they obtained from Mrs. Kelleher. The chief does not pretend that he was not greatly surprised at what they ascertained.

The two detectives renewed their work on the baffling case early. It was said that their investigations would probably take them out of Greater Boston.

Get Startling Clew.

"I realize," said Captain Perry, "that we have a serious case under consideration. I am not taking the entire responsibility of clearing it up. I have instructed the detectives to report everything they find to District Attorney Higgins.

"We have already received information that is of a startling character. The detectives are working on it. Of course, I cannot make known its nature. Later today I may have a statement to make."

It is known that Mrs. Kelleher would not be allowed to go on bail even if she obtained the $1,200 bond, in default of which she is held in the East Cambridge jail on the charge of arson. Arrangements have been made with Sheriff Fairbairn that if the bail is offered he will communicate with the Somerville police.

Mrs. Kelleher is on the verge of breaking down in the jail. She knows about the great quantity of poison found in the body of her daughter Catherine and also about the exhumation of the three other bodies.

Several Bills Unpaid.

The detectives told her bluntly and asked her what she knew about the poisoning of the little girl and about the deaths of the other members of the family.

What Mrs. Kelleher divulged has not been made public. The most important information they received was about the money—more than $4,000 within three years—she received from the insurance of the members of the family who died.

There has been a mystery as to where the money thus paid went, as tradesmen and doctors with whom Mrs. Kelleher had dealings told the police that they held bills against her. She owed a milk bill of nearly $40, a grocery and provision bill of nearly $30, physicians' bills of about $50, rent bills for one and two months in several of the homes in which she had lived, and an undertaker's bill.

She was known to have received from the death of Bridget Knowles a bank book, once in the possession of Martin J. Roche, a steamship agent, which showed a deposit of nearly $1,000. She received from the death of her husband $2,000, of which $1,000 came from a court of Foresters to which he belonged, and the other from a benefit society of which he was a member. She received from the death of Annie T. Kelleher $100, from that of William $200, from that of Mary $50 and from that of Catherine $350.

The police have been shown that she received within three years in cash nearly $4,000.

CONVICT BREAKS OUT OF SING SING

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 18.—William H. Morse, alias Tom Jackson, serving a ten-year sentence for highway robbery, sawed through the grating of his cell in the temporary camp on Iona Mountain early today and escaped. He left a note thanking the officials for having been so kind to him during his stay. Morse is a former United States soldier.

"He plays the tyrant, to be sure, but he is a tyrant who fears the carnival tickler. He sees things that have a bad smell, but the fresh breeze of Capitol Hill does not let the odor linger.

"He tries our patience, but he is always good—to laugh at. Thank Heaven for things that make us laugh. Without them we might easily become raw, untamed Anglo-Saxons, making much of Magna Charta, bellowing about an effete bill of rights, or even ready to fight for freedom of thought, freedom of speech and freedom of the press, as did our uncivilized ancestors at Lexington and Bunker Hill.

Lashed Horse of Young Girl.

"The beginnings of the mammoth jocularity, which has driven dull care away for more than seven years, the imposing gargoyle, grinning above the entrance of national temple of place and power, have humor all their own.

"A cowboy in his youth, he has never altogether grown out of that.

"An unimaginable Assemblyman, with preposterous notions in his early manhood.

"He boasts of Irish blood," continued Willett, "but no historic Irishman would have treated an ally as he treated Mr. Harriman.

"He exults in a strain of the Old Huguenot, but the Irish gentleman does not fly into a passion or lash the horse of a timid young girl, whose only offence is inadvertently passing the royal party in a public highway.

"Hear what this fountain of billingsgate has said of his predecessors in that high office:

"In his various writings he points out the errors of George Washington.

"In the life of Morris he alludes to the 'utter weakness and folly' of Thomas Jefferson's second term and the pitiable incompetence shown by him and his successor. He declares that James Monroe was 'as great a failure' as his predecessor, and Andrew Jackson he calls 'ignorant and headstrong.' Martin Van Buren, he insists, 'faithfully served the mammon of unrighteousness.' John Tyler was 'a politician of monumental littleness.' Franklin Pierce was 'a small politician of low capacity and mean surroundings.' James K. Polk was, 'excepting Tyler, the very smallest of the small Presidents who came between

"A King and a Court."

Jackson and Lincoln.'

"This covers the elder Harrison, Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore and James Buchanan.

"He has toleration only for the Adamses, who stood for 'federalist aristocracy,' and admiration only for Alexander Hamilton, the defeated champion of a limited monarchy."

Willett went on to say that the President had said John Paul Jones was a "pirate," that Napoleon the Great was "utterly unscrupulous," Wendell Phillips always "either mischievous or ridiculous and usually both," and that Thomas Payne was a "filthy little Atheist."

"Consistency," said the New Yorker, "is a jewel, which the gargoyle is always throwing to the swine. A free trader at Harvard, he has placed no bar in the way of the stand-patters."

"A noisy champion of civil service reform, he has lent patronage to the debauching of the Republican party and factional politics. No President in history ever adhered so closely to the feudal idea of officeholders subservient to a relentless boss.

"We have a king and a court at the White House now, as good an imitation of the real thing as is known to the nobility of a monarchical court."

He quoted from a story by David Graham Philips, in which a Western Senator's wife is made to say: "When the President leaves the table for a while during meals, the ladies, his wife and all of them, have to rise and stand till he comes back."

"Real Heroes Gall and Wornwood."

Willett then reviewed the formation of the Ananias Club and named its most distinguished membership. He charged that the President had treated Dewey, Schley and Miles badly, and added: "At all real heroes he shows his teeth because real heroes are gall and wormwood to bogus ones."

He declared that "scandalous conditions have developed in the army and navy under this most singular commander-in-chief."

He referred to the alleged Panama Canal scandal and said the "Scotch verdict 'Not proven' may fit those charges of corruption."

Willett declared that the President had gone about the work of curbing the trusts "like a man looking for a gas leak with a lighted candle" and had accomplished no practical results. The panic of last year was largely due, he asserted, to "the President's incendiary speeches."

The peroration of Willett's address was: "So the hay tedder has gone over the whole field, the jocularity has joked itself out, the gargoyle is about to grin its last grin over the portions of our temple of place and power; the eccentric exception to all rules is to get out of the limelight; the solecism sui generis is to disappear; the mixed metaphor vivant is to discontinue its unequal struggle with sane rhetoric, the impossibility rampant is to be retired; the comet that roves at will, regardless of the limitations of ordered law, is to vanish from our national sky; the Nero who fiddled while Rome was burning will be out of power on March 4."

PRINCE IN FEAR OF DEATH PLOT

VIENNA, Jan. 18.—Prince Nicholas is being guarded against public violence. The war lord has suddenly changed his tactics and this has caused the angry and disappointed mountaineers to turn on him. Since the change in his policy they have been snapping and snarling against their ruler and insisting that he has been bought and has sold the country to Austria.

KANSAS CRASH KILLS FIVE MEN

BEAGLE, Kas., Jan. 18.—The Missouri, Kansas & Texas flyer northbound split a switch here early to-day and was derailed. The engineer, John Cowden of Parsons, was killed, although his body has not been found. The engine ran into a string of bunk cars in which Italian laborers were sleeping. Four of the Italians were killed and several of them were injured. The fireman was dangerously injured. The side of the mail car was torn off and five mail clerks, Colonel Davenport, Homer Martin, Herbert Potter, George Tooley and Andrea Dunlop, were slightly injured. None of the passengers was injured.

TOUR BALLOTS COMING FAST

Judging by the rush which characterized the resumption of voting to-day in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S big European tour contest for Sunday school teachers of Boston and suburbs, this is going to be the liveliest week the contest has had.

No less than a dozen special ballots had been cast within an hour after the polls opened. Besides this, several mammoth bundles of ballots, from Boston and suburban points, were received by first mail. This is the way voting is likely to continue until next Thursday at 2 p. m., when it will close for the week.

The latest social event arranged in aid of a candidate in the Tour Contest is a subscription party to be given on the evening of February 5 by the Tammany Club, at No. 573 Massachusetts avenue. It will be in honor of Miss Mollie Elliott of the Church of St. Mary's of the Annunciation, Cambridge, who led in District No. 7 last week with a total of 70,172 votes.

NEW BOOK AID TO KNITTERS

The present vogue for knitting and crocheting has resulted in the publication, in revised form, of an old favorite manual on these two subjects. It is "Fleisher's Knitting and Crocheting Manual," the seventh edition of which has just made its appearance.

Commencing with instruction in the fundamental stitches, that part of the books has been greatly enlarged and bettered through the addition of explanatory illustrations. Everything that is not strictly in fashion at the present time has been eliminated, and the new designs have been incorporated in the new edition.

Special attention has been given to sweaters, with all the new models included. Shawls, Afghans and coverlets have been specially treated. Skirts, kimonos, capes, slippers and all kinds of babies' wear are shown in great variety. Every kind of knitted wear and crocheted work is included. This, according to the publishers, places it as the only authoritative book on the subject now issued. Full information can be secured from S. B. and B. W. Fleisher, Philadelphia.

PRETTY GIRLS TO PLAY WALTZ POLO

ORANGE, Jan. 18.—This town is in a high state of excitement over the outcome of the waltz polo game to-night, and since many of the town's prettiest girls will be seen in the line-up it is expected Red Men's Hall will be crowded. Waltz polo is a new game invented by R. H. Latimer, a local dancing teacher. Four couples compose a team. Each gentleman is provided with a light polo stick, and the object is to shoot the wooden block between the goal posts while waltzing. Roller polo rules govern the game, the strictest rule being to keep dancing. To-night is the first opportunity the townspeople will have to witness the game between the school and town teams. The winning team will challenge any team in the country.

BODY MAY BE EXHUMED IN WILL PUZZLE

Believing that Patrick Monahan, the wealthy Charlestown business man, who died on September 29, 1908, was a victim of arsenical or ptomaine poisoning, Ex-United States District Attorney, John H. Casey, counsel for the sister and brother of the dead man in the wash tub will case, may to-day ask that the body be exhumed for an autopsy. The action is likely to follow a conference to-day with Dr. W. P. Hammond, the Monahan family physician.

Dr. Hammond says to-day: "The symptoms of Monahan's sickness were those of ptomaine poisoning, and the same symptoms are characteristic of arsenic poisoning. When I was called on that Monday morning, I found Monahan, according to his own diagnosis, suffering from the results of some fish he had eaten. He had the symptoms of ptomaine poisoning—vomiting and severe pains—and I treated him for that. He grew so bad that another physician was called in.

Death Cause in Doubt.

When asked if he thought Mr. Monahan could have been a sufferer from Bright's disease, he said he hardly thought it possible.

"If he had Bright's disease I should have known it," said Dr. Hammond. "All I know is that the symptoms of arsenical and ptomaine poisoning are the same."

Dr. H. J. Kenney of Everett was called in on Monahan's case. The cause of death was given as Bright's disease.

Monahan died on September 29 and was supposed to have left $1,000,000. No will was found, and John Monahan of Chicago, a brother, was made administrator. On December 17 an alleged will, dated August 15, 1907, which had been found tacked on the bottom of a washing machine tub, was offered for probate.

By the terms of this document $30,000 was disposed of, but an inventory shows the estate to be about $126,000. Attorney John F. Lynch, in company with Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. Annie Fall, a niece, and Francis McGuinness, a nephew, are said to have found the paper.

Seeking Witnesses.

Nathaniel N. Jones of Casey & Jones, attorneys for the heirs, said that they claim the will found on the washtub is a forgery; that not one of the three alleged witnesses to that document has been found, and that the paper was never known to or signed by Monahan, the deceased.

Search for three persons, two men and one woman, who witnessed the will is being made because of the charge made by John Monahan, brother of the deceased, who declares that the will is a forgery.

CINCOLA HELD IN DEATH CASE

Francesco Cincola was held without bail by Judge Bolster in the Municipal Criminal Court to-day on the charge of killing Cafligio de Lucca, who was shot to death on Hale street, West End, last night. Cincolo, who is fifty-four years old, was arrested by Policeman Ramsey, and at the request of the police the hearing was continued until January 2. Both the prisoner and the dead man lived at No. 15 South Margin street. The victi mof the tragedy was twenty-six years old.

SHERIDAN GUARDS TO DANCE TO-NIGHT

The Sheridan Guards Company, Ninth Regiment, Massachusetts State Militia, will hold their forty-second annual military ball in Lyceum Hall to-night. A concert will be held at 8 and the grand march at 9. The members will appear in the uniform of their ranks. Captain Francis J. O'Dermott and Lieutenant McWeeny are in charge of the committee.

PASSENGERS ARE INJURED IN STATION CRASH

Many passengers on a Watertown branch train entering North Station on track No. 10 to-day were painfully bruised and thrown into an indiscriminate heap by an ungovernable locomotive which crashed into two "dead" cars against the buffer at the end of the track.

The accident was due to the ice-encrusted rails. The engineer had set his brakes at the customary point as the train enters the depot shed. As the speed did not slacken, he put on further force. With a falsetto shriek of defiance that alarmed the passengers in itself, the wheels slid along the glistening rails.

The locomotive refused to respond to the commands of the engineer, and with all its momentum taken from a point 200 yards up the track dashed forward into the empty cars.

It was a heavy Monday morning train, with more than the usual number of passengers.

Women Panic Stricken.

In their customary haste to alight the passengers were crowding the aisles of the cars. As the collision came every person was swept off his feet.

A number who had ventured to the slippery platforms of the cars were thrown with violence to the asphalt walks of the trainshed.

Women began to scream at what looked like a big accident and the confusion was taking on alarming dimensions when the locomotive crashed into the empty cars ahead.

The crackling thunder of the impact was all that was needed to complete the panic.

It was fully ten minutes before the terrified passengers could extricate themselves from the frenzied mass into which they had been pitched.

All the detail of station policemen was summoned and they made a thorough canvass of the injuries suffered.

Many Cut and Bruised.

A number of persons complained of severe cuts and painful bruises, but no one was sufficiently hurt to go to a hospital for treatment.

The two "dead" cars were reduced to splinters, requiring the assistance of a wrecking crew to remove the debris.

TAKE ALLEGED THIEVES AFTER LIVELY CHASE

After a lively chase of several blocks early to-day Sergeant Mosher and Patrolmen Harney and Foley of the La Grange Street Station arrested Louis H. Marquise, twenty-three years old, of North Cambridge, and James H. O'Brien, the same age, claiming residence at the People's Palace, on a charge of attempting to break and enter the liquor store of William E. LeClair, No. 203 Essex street.

Sergeant Mosher, who was in plain clothes, saw the men near the store, and becoming suspicious, examined the rear doors. He found the padlock had been pried away, but the hasp twisted and prevented the men from opening it.

With Officers Harney and Foley he started after the three men, who ran up Essex street. The officers gained rapidly and Marquise was caught on Harrison avenue extension. The other two continued to Washington street. O'Brien was taken in Fayette place after a lively tussle in a doorway. The other man continued down Washington street toward Summer, and escaped.

Serve One Breakfast
Shot from Guns

Serve this food once, and we have you. You'll never go back to common cereals then.

Think of kernels of grain puffed to eight times their size.

The coats are unbroken; the shapes are unchanged. But the starch granules are all exploded.

Prof. Anderson, formerly of Columbia University, invented this process to make cereals digestible.

But he made them also so enticing that people forget all else.

Quaker Puffed Wheat, 10c
Quaker Puffed Rice, 13c

This is the curious process:

The whole grain is put into great steel guns. The guns are sealed, then revolved for an hour, in a heat of 550 degrees.

The moisture in the grain turns to steam, under terrific pressure. Then we fire the guns.

Instantly every starch granule explodes into a myriad particles, so the digestive juices can get to them.

The wheat or the rice looks just as it did, but magnified eight times over. Get a package—see it.

All the Patents are controlled by The Quaker Oats Company.

18,000 IN PERMANENT MOVEMENT WILL LIVE ALWAYS AS JESUS DID

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17.—The attempt to "live as Jesus would," begun in this city two weeks ago and which was conducted with such gratifying results has assumed the form of a permanent movement. At a grand mass meeting in this city last evening 18,000 Cleveland young people who have taken part in the movement pledged themselves to keep up the attempt during the rest of their natural lives. A temporary failure or backsliding from the attempt is not to deter them from renewing effort.

Church organizations all over the country have sent to W. D. Price the Case School student, who started the movement assurances of support, and it is the intention of the latter to try to start the movement in New York.

At the meeting last night more than fifty persons who had tried the plan for two weeks told of their experiences, and all declared that it was easy if one was only sincere.

Renew Vows Each Year.

It was announced at the meeting that the first Sunday in every January will be set aside as a day when those in the movement may renew their vows to conduct their lives as they believe Christ would have them. In every city in the land an effort is to be made to start a trial similar to the one just ended in Cleveland on the first Sunday in March. An experience meeting, like the one held yesterday in Epworth Memorial Church, will be held in the various cities the second Sunday in March.

"Cleveland is sweeter since the movement began," testified Vice-President Mehling of the Epworth League.

To remind Christians that they should live as they think Christ would in their place, cards were distributed to be signed at home, reading: "What would Jesus do? In the quietness of my communion with Almighty God I do solemnly reaffirm all previous covenants made with my Saviour and will conscientiously endeavor to live and act as he would were he in my place. I will also endeavor to interpret his will from a careful study of God's word and the teachings of the Holy Spirit."

When Mr. Wallace asked for a sign nearly every person in the church, which was packed to the doors, raised a hand.

"Not Yet Perfect."

"You have none of you attained perfection during the last two weeks, but you will have better efficiency as the movement continues," said Mr. Price to those assembled. "Thousands have lived purer and nobler lives. That in itself is an answer to any criticism that might be made, for isn't anything that tends to raise the moral standard good? Haven't you found Cleveland a better place to live in?

"Let it be clear that we have not been putting Christianity on trial during the past two weeks. We have put on trial the concrete question of what Jesus would do. We have found that the movement is helpful, and we are ready to consider ways of assuring its permanency."

Rev. Charles W. Sheldon of Topeka, Kas., author of "In His Steps," the book which inspired the Cleveland movement, wrote a letter of encouragement to Mr. Price, and it was read at the meeting, in part as follows:

"Will you please say to the young people I am very much interested to know the result of this experiment, which should pass into a daily habit for life. If this should become the habit of all the Christians in this country, old and young, it would revolutionize business and politics and amusements and turn things upside down generally. We must not forget that the first Christians were characterized as men who turned the world upside down. They found it very much topsy-turvy, and their turning it upside down made it right side up. I believe that it is the business of Christians in the world yet to turn things upside down so that they are right side up."

Made Grocer Happy.

John Jordan, a grocer, told the meeting: "It has been a great blessing to me during the past two weeks. These two weeks have been the happiest in twenty-seven years of serving Christ. In weighing goods, in serving a customer, I have asked myself, 'What would Jesus do?' It has not failed me."

"The Endeavor pledge has become nearer and dearer to me every day I live," said Miss Mabel McKenzie, stenographer, of the Fidelity Free Baptist Church.

"I have got to know more about the Bible, to know what Jesus would do," declared one man. "I must know my orders to obey them."

HONEYMOON TRIP ABROAD FOR SHAFERS

Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Sydney Shafer are in New York to-day preparing for their honeymoon trip to Europe, having gone to the metropolis from Boston following their wedding on Saturday night at Hotel Vendome.

The handsome bride is the daughter of Samuel Shuman, a member of the firm of A. Shuman & Co. She is very popular in New York society, where her brother Waldo makes his home. When the couple sails they will be given a royal bridal send-off at the pier by both Boston and New York friends.

The wedding was one of the most brilliant events of the Boston social season and guests from all parts of the country witnessed the impressive ceremony, which was performed at 6 o'clock in the large ballroom by Rabbi Charles Fleischer of Temple Israel.

Algernon Sydney Shafer, the groom, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shafer of New York. The groom, attended by Edward U. Walter of this city, preceded by Rabbi Fleischer, entered the wedding room to the wedding march from "Lohengrin." Following closely behind were the ushers, the bridesmaids, matron of honor and the flower boy, strewing flowers along the path, followed by the bride on the arm of her father.

The ushers were Harold A. Shuman and Waldo I. Shuman, brothers of the bride, of Boston, and Ralph Kempner, Harry Hartjen, Maurice Leon, Herbert H. Lehman, Otto Kaufman, Alfred M. Wolf, Joseph Lilenthal, Henry Block, Charles E. Shafer, Edward Shafer and James Frank of New York.

The bridesmaids were Miss Florence Shafer, a sister of the groom, of New York; Miss Carrie Morrill, Miss Anna Strannahan and Miss Anna Messer of Boston. The matron of honor was Mrs. Carl Brandt of Boston, and the flower boy, Robert S. Brandt.

Following the ceremony the guests went to the banquet hall. At a reception in the ballroom 250 guests were received.

END REVEL AT SUNRISE WITH WEIRD SALOME

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—With masked beauties in a whirl of fun, with Salome outdone and with the popping of corks, the "international dance," given by Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Gouraud in the ballroom of the Cafe Martin, came to an end as the sun rose to-day and a horde of fantastically clad figures dodged into taxicabs and automobiles and were whisked away.

There were dancers from far Samoa, there was a "Salome" who out-Salomed anything seen in these parts.

Clad in the gorgeous robes of the Kalmur of Ghosh, the irrepressible Jackson Gouraud, assisted his wife, splendidly gowned in green and gold with the jade ornaments of an Egyptian queen, received the gay throng.

Mizner in the "Salome."

High jinks were first initiated when the winsome Odette Valllery, premiere danseuse of the Manhattan Opera House, danced a sort of "Salome" with Wilson Mizner, once known to fame as the husband of Mrs. Yerkes. Screams of laughter and the splitting of white gloves greeted the strenuous dancing of Mizner and Mlle. Vallery which was suddenly interrupted when the camera brigade entered upon the scene and began banging away with flash lights.

All of the guests did not wear masks and domino. For example, Harry Perry Disbecker, whom Broadway knows as the bon vivant, and who sent a box of candy and a magnum of wine to little Rose, the elephant of the Hippodrome, was there in evening dress. With him was a toy replica of Rosa, and as he dragged it about with him.

Jesse Lewisohn, the man of millions and owner of swift race horses, smiled quietly on the throng. He, too, wore no makeup, but he was always the centre of a bevy of beauties.

Miss Hopper Helps.

Edna McCauley was also there radiant in the costume of a white dove. Dorothy Russell, the dark-haired daughter of the fair Lillian, danced. Addison Mizner, brother of the redoubtable Wilson, gave an imitation of a houla-houla dancer from Samoa.

When the camera brigade got in their full work Edna Wallace Hopper centered a group which, for bizarre costume, simply whizzed past anything recently attempted. A. C. Brown, who used to be a broker in Wall Street, gave Miss Hopper a $7,000 motor car, lifted her up and waltzed around the big ball room with her, while she sang.

Mrs. Gourade danced a stately minuet with Brandon Hurst, a modern mephisto in full crimson panoply. A burst of applause followed the entrance of Valeska Surat, gowned a la directoire in salmon colored satin slashed forty ways. And there were a hundred or more other persons well-known on Broadway in the throng.

WOMEN FIGHT RAISE IN LICENSE FEES

Dorchester women are vigorously protesting against raising the license fee of druggists' sixth-class license fees from $1 to $100, and many of them think that if pharmacists have to pay such a high price for filling alcoholic prescriptions it will turn their stores into places little better than barrooms.

AWARD WOMAN $616 FOR FALSE ARREST

It will cost Isaac Berman, who lived on Pleasant street, East Boston, $616, according to the verdict rendered by a jury in the Superior Court, for having caused the arrest of Mrs. Theresa J. Sheehan. Berman declared that he had seen the woman take some coal out of his coalbin and had her arrested.

RUTH PERKINS, WHO PROTESTS NEW GUARDIAN

GIRL WANTS TO NAME HER OWN GUARDIAN

Declaring that she was not allowed to choose her own guardian, sixteen-year-old Ruth Standish Perkins of Medford appeals to the Supreme Court against the decree of Judge Lawton of the Middlesex Probate Court appointing Alice B. Montgomery of Boston as her guardian.

The girl's father, Dana E. Perkins of Medford, appeals jointly with his daughter against Judge Lawton's appointment. The appeals were filed with the Supreme Court docket at East Cambridge to-day by Attorney Samuel M. Child of Boston, acting for father and daughter.

Recently Alice Montgomery petitioned to be named as Ruth's guardian, representing that Ruth desired her for guardian. When the case came before Judge Lawton the father and daughter, the latter having changed her mind, wished Ella C. Ferris of Wakefield as guardian. She is Ruth's aunt. But Judge Lawton named Alice B. Montgomery.

Perkins, the father, in his appeal, says he is competent to care for the girl and that he is the sole surviving parent.

TROLLEY GRAB LEGISLATION IS OPPOSED

The Railroad Commissioners, in a report made to the Legislature to-day, declare in general against the merging of steam and street railway companies. The commissioners, however, virtually nullify their own statements by advising that the Berkshire Street Railway Company, owned by the New Haven road, be allowed to purchase the Bennington & North Adams street Railway Company. They say:

"A careful re-examination of existing transportation conditions in Massachusetts and a survey of the whole field of prospective service, giving due consideration to the demands of the travelling public for the immediate future, convinces us that the established policy of the Commonwealth with respect to keeping separate and distinct the railroad corporations and street railway companies is a system of official administration entirely consistent with the public interest.

"The board is therefore of the opinion that no general legislation is now necessary to change or modify the existing laws as to the relations between these two classes of public servants.

"Under a wise governmental policy the transportation facilities of this State have been developed and are being constantly improved. A prudent conservatism may well refrain from a radical departure from this policy."

In response to the question raised by the Senate as to the Berkshire, merger, the commissioners made this reply:

"We see no valid reason why the Berkshire Street Railway Company should not be permitted by special enactment of the General Court to purchase the property and franchises of the Bennington and North Adams Street Railway Company, a connecting line over which it now operates its cars. This authority, however, should be conferred only after fully safeguarding the interests of Massachusetts."

KING BACK AT PRISON BENCH

After his first Sunday in Charlestown State Prison, Cardenio F. King, the former financial agent, is at work again today in the hosiery knitting room, this light labor being given him on account of his physical condition. King attended divine service in the prison on the Sabbath, in conformity to the rule that compels convicts to attend except on account of illness. He listened to a sermon preached by the Rev. Herbert W. Stebbins, the prison chaplain.

King rose at 5:30 on the Sabbath morning and went in line with the other prisoners to the mess-room, where he received his breakfast allowance of baked rice (no sugar), milk, bread and coffee. After service he had baked sausage, potato and bread for dinner.

He was given enough at dinner to last him for supper, as the prisoners do not leave their cells Sunday afternoons. King spent the rest of the day reading and writing in his cell.

CATHOLICS IN OFFICE NEEDED, PRIEST SAYS

The Rev. Father John A. Crowe of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Cambridge declares that there are not enough Catholic Congressmen sent to Washington to fairly represent that faith. At the banquet of the Holy Name Society he urged 500 men present to begin work at once to put Catholics in office.

The clergymen said that we ought to have more Catholic policemen, judges in our courts, a catholic mayor should be elected in Cambridge, and that it is about time for a Catholic Governor. In the course of his address he said:

"I want you to begin as low as you like in the matter. See to it that decent Catholic policemen are appointed to safeguard your boys and girls on the streets.

"It would be a good thing to have Catholic judges appointed who would see to it that widows and orphans got fair play. It would be a good thing to have a Catholic in the mayor's chair to keep poor people working through the Winter and not have them starve to death in the interests of economy. It is almost time we had a Catholic governor in this old commonwealth to do justice and honor to the Catholic people."

MASS TROOPS AT LISBON

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 18.—In anticipation of a terrorist outbreak on February 1, the first anniversary of the assassinations of King Carlos and Crown Prince Luis, the government to-day began concentrating troops at Lisbon.

MAN WHO CAUSED BIG HARRIMAN LOSS DIES

DENVER, Jan. 18.—Lying in a bathtub in the Brown Palace Hotel, with boiling water still cooking his body, John C. Beatty of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., was found dead. He was a large holder of land in several Western States and the projector of the Imperial Valley enterprise in Southern California, which resulted in the overflow of the Colorado River and cost E. H. Harriman millions.

PACKING HOUSE MAN HONORED BY FRIENDS

Charles A. Robinson of Roslindale was presented with a handsome gold watch and Knight Templar charm on the occasion of his retirement from the packing house business after twelve years' service by his business associates, who gathered in his office at No. 1 Blackstone street, where P. L. Hughes, superintendent of the New England district, handed Mr. Robinson the costly gifts.

The first week's reductions now being made every day. ¼ Reduction on everything that did not sell out with the first 2 weeks after being put on sale.

A New Kind of Store

The New Tunnel Bargain Basement

Enter Tunnel Entrance direct from Tunnel Trains at Winter Street Station, or our Washington or Winter Street Entrances.

A New Kind of Store—Every article in every department every day an extraordinary bargain.

A New Kind of Store—With a new automatic system of low prices.

A New Kind of Store—In which everything is sold out quickly—or given away.

Women's, Misses', Girls' and Infants' Furnishings in the New Tunnel Bargain Basement went on sale Monday, January 4, for the first time, and will be on sale every day hereafter at the most extraordinary values that Boston has yet enjoyed: every day—week after week.

The First Price Will Probably Sell Out the Lot the First Day

Automatic Prices

By any chance should part of a lot remain unsold at the end of two weeks then begins the automatic reductions, as follows:

Beginning 3rd Week—¼ Reduction
Should any be left beginning 4th Week—½ Reduction
Should any be left beginning 5th Week—¾ Reduction
Should any be left beginning 6th Week—Given Away

Nothing can stay in this new store longer than five weeks. ☞ The chances are, however, that the first price will be so extraordinary there will be little left to reduce by this extreme method.

NOTE: Every sale ticket is stamped with the date the article was received, so that it will be very clear just what the proper reduction should be in every instance.

High Grade Factory Clearances

¼ reduction on everything that did not sell out within the first 2 weeks after being put on sale.

No Other Store in the World Like This:

Some big lots—some small lots—bought as the chances of trade may offer, making possible the most extraordinary a store—as may be judged from this advertisement, because out of all the makers and factories—big and little—there are always a number who have left-over lots—cancelled orders, etc., which it pays to sell out quickly at any price they can get for cash.

The Tunnel Bargain Basement is ready every day to buy desirable merchandise for cash and to sell it in a few days at a small profit. If it doesn't sell in a few days at a small profit, then it must be sold at a loss—It must be sold quickly—That is the system of the new store. Your assurance that the first price will be an extraordinary one lies in the fact that we make a little profit by making it low enough to sell the article the first day it goes on sale, otherwise we take a loss.

Mark-Down Lots from Regular Departments—In addition to the New Purchases of special lots—odd pieces, models, discontinued numbers, etc.—will be sent to the Tunnel Bargain Basement Store after the Opening Days.

The Filene Guarantee—Notwithstanding the extraordinary price system, nothing will be bought for or sold in this new store that is not up to our standard. Every article, no matter how low the price, will carry the Filene guarantee of dependable quality.

BISHOP M'QUAID OF ROCHESTER PASSES AWAY

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Right Rev. Bernard J. McQuaid, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Rochester, died at the Episcopal residence on Frank street at 9:05 a. m. to-day.

The Right Rev. Bishop Bernard J. McQuaid of Rochester, N. Y., was born in Burlington, Vt., in 1824. He was the third oldest Roman Catholic bishop in the United States.

He rose rapidly to power and influence in the church till he was appointed bishop of the Rochester diocese. His administration of the diocese was marked by great enterprise, force and sagacity. He was one of the greatest advocates in the country of the cause of Catholic education, not only locally, but in the collegiate department. His diocese at Rochester contains some of the best organized church educational institutions in the country. All these have prospered under his ecclesiastical patronage and have become a vital factor in the educational forces of the church.

He was one of the closest friends of the late Archbishop John J. Williams of this city, and the unexpected demise of the Boston Archbishop a year ago last Fall gave Bishop McQuaid a shock from which he has never recovered.

Archbishop Williams had but just come back to Boston from his annual vacation at the house of Bishop McQuaid, and when he started for Boston he declared, when saying "Good-by!" to Bishop McQuaid, that he felt in splendid health and had enjoyed his vacation immensely. Consequently the news, a few days after his return, of the illness and death of Archbishop Williams, cam to Bishop McQuaid with peculiar suddenness and shock.

HAINS VERDICT IS DENOUNCED BY MRS. ANNIS

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—"Could not some 'unwritten law' have moved the jurors, as they considered the evidence, to think of how an honest business man—the head of a family—was ruthlessly shot down without being given an opportunity to defend himself? Could not an 'unwritten law' have impelled the jurors to have pictured to themselves the grief and misery of the victim's little children? And if they did not think of this, could they not have at least considered that these children had been robbed of their protector—their bread winner?"

In the first authorized statement she has made since Thornton Jenkins Hains was acquited of the murder of William E. Annis, his widow, to-day declared that the finding of the jury was the shame of New York.

Mrs. Annis made the statement to a reporter at her home in the College View apartments, No. 501 West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth street. Her mother stood beside her as she spoke.

"Had the slayers of my husband been poor men it would have been a different story."

$3,600 FOR LYNN SCHOOL PRINCIPAL

Miss Maria Paul, principal in the Eastern Avenue School, Lynn, to-day received a bequest of $3,600 in cash by the will of the late Annie J. Kemp, who formerly resided at No. 35 Burrill avenue. Miss Kemp was an intimate friend of Miss Paul's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Paul, who died two years ago when a resident of the Lynn City Home. The terms of the will left the money to Mrs. Paul, and on her death it was to go to the daughter. The bequest became effective to-day.

SOCIETY WAITS WEDDING DAY OF MISS BOWDITCH

February 6 is the date set for wedding of Miss Alice Bowditch and Charles R. Sturgis. Miss Bowditch is the daughter of the Edward Bowditches of Albany, but is especially well known in Boston where she has spent much of her time since her debut. On Saturday afternoon she was honor guest at a reception by her fiance's mother, Mrs. John H. Sturgis of Beacon street, whom she is visiting.

Mr. Sturgis is a member of the Somerset, Tavern, Norfolk, Hunt, Tennis and Racquet, Eastern Yacht and Union Boat clubs, and is a Harvard '93 man. Among Miss Bowditch's most intimate friends in Boston are Miss Barbara Burr and the Misses Eleanor and Alice Sohier. She is a tall, slender, graceful girl with a particularly pretty face and pleasing manner and will be a distinct acquisition to the young married set here.

Noyes Testimonial Patronesses.

Among the society women patronesses for the testimonial to Edith Rowena Noyes in Steinert Hall this evening are Mrs. Thomas Mack, Mrs. Lewis Crossett, Mrs. John Graham, Mrs. John F. Perry, Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter, Mrs. Henry Houser, Mrs. Charles Weld, Mrs. Frederick Emery, Mrs. Arthur Foote, Mrs. George Whiting, Mrs. Louis Elson, Mrs. Marie D. Quiet Birthday Party

Mrs. Henry Howard Fay of Beacon street is celebrating her birthday to-day at her home, but more quietly than usual on account of the critical illness of her venerable aunt, Miss Kate Spooner of Commonwealth avenue. Only the immediate family is participating in the celebration, including Mrs. Frederick L. Dabney of Bay State road, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., and the Misses Dorothy and Mary Fay.

Mr. Heinrich Gebhard is giving a piano recital in Steinert Hall at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Simes of Brookline have announced the engagement of their daughter, Maud Burbank, to Robert Hatch Harding of Portsmouth, N. H., Dartmouth, '05, and Harvard Law School, '08.

Notable Week-End Guests.

Among notable week-end guests in Boston were Sir John and Lady Harrington (Amy McMillan), who arrived on Friday from Washington and were registered at the Touraine. The Harringtons arrived in Washington several weeks ago after an absence of over a year, during which time they were in Abyssinia, where Lord Harrington held the post of British consul. They have been the guests in Washington of Lady Harrington's mother, Mrs. James McMillan.

Miss Elizabeth Gray, daughter of the Morris Grays of Beacon street, left Saturday for New York, where she will be the guest of Miss Edith Bird, who is there for the Winter with her brother, Charles Bird.

Mrs. Rockwood Hoar, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, at her home in Gloucester street, has returned to her home in Worcester.

Home From European Honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Briggs Potter (Ellen Sturgis Hooper), who shortly after their marriage in September sailed for Europe, arrived home yesterday. Mr. Potter is connected with the Museum of Fine Arts.

Dr. Chandler Robbins of Beacon street and his uncle, Mr. Dickson of the Vendome, left town the latter part of the week for a six weeks' visit at Palm Beach.

Mr. George B. Dexter was of those sailing from New York Saturday for Naples and Genoa. Mr. Dexter is starting on an extensive tour which may include a trip around the world.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Helen S. Bouve of Brookline to Thomas E. Wing of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Phipps are among Bostonians registered at Hotel Bon Air, Augusta, Georgia.

An important engagement just announced is that of Miss Amy Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Richards of Philadelphia, to Edwin O. Fitch of Boston, assistant naval constructor, U. S. N. The wedding will take place in Philadelphia on February 2.

New England Briefs

ONSET—Martin V. Thayer took a lighted lantern into his private acetyline gas plant to see what was the matter with it as all the lights went out. The plant blew up, killed him and wrecked his home.

NEW HAVEN—The church parade of the Yale juniors, who celebrate their right to wear frock coats, silk hats and carry canes, was made in a terrific snow, rain and sleet storm. The juniors were game, however, and each junior was accompanied by a pretty young woman wrapped snugly in furs, as they observed the annual custom.

LOWELL—Mayor Brown, the ex-policeman, has given his first order to Superintendent William B. Moffatt, his former superior. He sent it by the city messenger. He demands an explanation of an apparent discrimination in the matter of enforcing the Sunday-closing laws.

WATERBURY, Ct.—Two cars crashed together on Willow Hill. The passengers escaped, but some of them by a narrow margin.

GLOUCESTER—Captain Robert Griffin and his crew of five on the schooner Conqueror, were to-day given silver medals and $5 each by the Massachusetts Life Saving Association for their valor in rescuing the crew of the British schooner Erie of Nauset in December.

HOME MIXTURE CURES RHEUMATISM

The thousands of men and women who have felt the torture of dread rheumatism will be glad to avail themselves of the following prescription which will be found the most effective remedy obtainable for rheumatism and all kindred forms of blood diseases which cause pains in the muscles, joints, lame back, throbbing head and general debility:

"One ounce syrup of Sarsaparilla compound; one ounce Toris compound; half pint of high grade whiskey. These to be mixed and shaken well and used in doses of a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist, who will mix it or it can be mixed at home, and it is said to show immediate results.

BOSTON MAN LAUNCHES NEW MYSTIC CULT

The Eternal and Universal Brotherhood of Mystics is the name of a new organization formed in this city, with 500 members included in the Boston Central Association and in branches in New York and other places. Mrs. John Hay, widow of the late Secretary of State, is said to be one of the leading members.

The Mystics try to live up to the strange, esoteric life of the wonderful Hindu Yoki, or "adepts," as they are called. They do not, however, consider themselves so apart from the rest of humanity as the true Hindu Yogi, who is held as well-nigh sacred by the reverent East Indians.

The present brotherhood originated in the mind of Hosea E. Bowen of this city. Mr. Bowen lives at Wellesley Hills and is recorded in the city directory as "manager" at room No. 830, No. 100 Boylston street. Frank Harrison of Boston and New York was associated with Mr. Bowen in forming the Boston Central Association.

The executive office of the brotherhood is in Boston. But the general headquarters is at Framingham, where the official text-book of the cult, a black-bound volume like a Bible, is printed.

The Mystics have elaborate plans for the future. They have taken an option on a tract of land on the banks of the Penobscot river in Maine, where they plan to start a Mystic colony. There the Mystic Adepts will strive to live according to the high precepts of the Yogi teachings.

To quote the words of Mr. Bowen:

"To live quietly, simply and silently the law of love, as a modest, meek Mystic, is to overcome all disease, poverty and drudgery and to enter into eternal peace, power and plenty here and now; all other (mental) ways are dire failures."

The advanced members, or "Blissful Prophets," issue the teachings to be studied and followed by the new members. The novitiates are given counsel how they should live and act by means of "The Mystic Text Book," the official volume of the Brotherhood.

Once established on the banks of the Penobscot, the Mystic colony will expand widely. The method of handling money there will be new. The workers will be paid and the pay will be put in a common box or pay-chest. Each worker will help himself or herself to the wages due.

HATTERS DENY BROKEN FAITH

DANBURY, Conn., Jan. 18.—Officers of the local unions of striking hatters to-day received from the executive board of the United Hatters of North America its answer to the statement of the National Association of Hat Manufacturers that the men had broken faith.

It emphatically states that the union did not break faith, that the manufacturers violated an agreement and that the men will stand by their position. The statement is lengthy, taking up in detail the origin of the trouble over the moving from Boston to Philadelphia of the Guyer hat factory.

MORE 'QUAKES FOR MESSINA

MESSINA, Jan. 18.—Slight earthquake shocks continue to be experienced here at brief intervals. The quakes are not being registered by the observatories in the immediate vicinity, which is evidence that the movements are local only. General Mazza has given instructions that all documents or other property found in the ruins of the American consulate be turned over to Stuart K. Lupton, the new consul of the United States.

SAY ROOSEVELT IS TO ASK NAVY SHAKE-UP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—It is possible President Roosevelt will send a special message to Congress within the next few weeks requesting a reorganization of the navy. This has been hinted by Secretary Newberry and others. The President is said to have had this in view when he called the conference last Friday.

KNIGHTS TEMPLARS' CHIEF PASSES AWAY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 18.—Judge William L. Gross, commander of the Grand Commandery of the Knights Templars, and for many years an eminent jurist, died here to-day, aged sixty-nine years. His death resulted from a fall. He leaves a wife and two children.

CARPENTERS IN SESSION.

The Massachusetts State Council of the Carpenters' Union began a three days' convention in Lynn to-day. Mayor James E. Rich welcomed the delegates, and President Daniel O. Macglashing of the union responded.

DR. WORCESTER TO PREACH NEW CURE IN WEST

Rev. Elwood Worcester, rector of Emmanuel Church and founder of the "Emmanuel movement for the treatment of nervous diseases by mental suggestion, left Boston to-day for San Francisco. He will be gone three weeks.

He has gone in answer to an appeal by Bishop Nichols and the people of the Pacific Coast to learn from its founder just what the Emmanuel movement is and how to apply it. Dr. Worcester preaches next Sunday at Leland Stanford University.

During Dr. Worcester's absence Rev. Samuel McComb, the assistant rector, will carry on Dr. Worcester's work. Dr. McComb has just issued a reply to Sir Dyce Duckworth's criticism of the Emmanuel movement. The English knight declared that the movement is ridiculous, but he says he is not surprised that it comes from Boston, "a city which is a perennial source of false doctrine and which produces and contains more unstable men and women than any other city I know."

Dr. McComb says in reply: "We do not claim that people are healed alone by faith treatment. It is used in conjunction with medicine. Dr. Duckworth belongs to a small body of English conservatives who think America is the home of cranks and people who are more or less crazy. Boston contains more educated and intellectual people than any other city of its size in America or England."

FINDS FIANCEE SLAIN IN HOME

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 18.—With their heads submerged in water in a bathroom at their home, W. L. Seeley, an attorney, his wife and his daughter, Miss Rene, were found by E. W. Zibbell and Guy M. Smelzer. Smelzer was engaged to marry Miss Seeley, and Zibbell was a friend of the family.

Mrs. Seeley and her daughter had been murdered with blows inflicted with some blunt instrument, believed to have been a hammer. Seeley had been drowned, according to Coroner Snyder.

Charles Seeley, his brother, knows no motive for the crime, and thinks the man must have been insane.

Clutched in one hand of Seeley, which was beneath the water, was a pocket handkerchief which, although soaked in water, still carried a faint trace of the odor of chloroform.

There were three wounds on the head of Mrs. Seeley. The blow that evidently killed Miss Seeley was dealt her over the left eye. There were no marks on the man.

2 BLACK HAND MEN ARE SLAIN

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 18.—The State police engaged in a desperate battle with Black Hand men to-day at a place where a wealthy woman was supposed to have left a package containing $2,000, as a result of a threat. Two of the blackmailers were fatally shot and nine were captured. Bloodhounds are trailing those who escaped.

OLD SPRING HILL COLLEGE BURNED

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 18.—The South's oldest institution of learning, Spring Hill College, was destroyed by fire early to-day. Fortunately the flames were detected before the exits were cut off, and the sleeping inmates were aroused and all piloted to safety.

CHICAGO TRAFFIC HIT BY SMOKE AND FOG

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—A thick blanket of fog and smoke settled over the city and lake early to-day. Traffic was reduced and thousands of persons were delayed in arriving at their places of employment.

City Hall Notes

After to-day's meeting of the board, Alderman Giblin's seat will be vacant for over a fortnight. The East Boston member will journey South with his wife, who is just recovering from a very severe illness. There is no prospect that the board will select a chairman before he returns.

City Auditor Mitchell has received instructions from the Mayor's office to examine the telephone bills of the various city departments and point out where the service can be materially reduced without impairing its efficiency. The Mayor feels that $40,000 per year is too large an expenditure.

Ex-representative Clarence Starrats bill for damages against the city, which was approved by the committee on claim, of the City Council, for $150 and subsequently disapproved by higher authorities, will be threshed out in the courts. He was injured through a fall, which he claims was caused by a defective flag stone.

Dr. Maguire, resident surgeon at the Relief station at East Boston, has received assurance from the hospital trustees that the institution will soon be equipped with an automobile ambulance.

Mayor Hibbard has received and adopted an invitation to attend the Police Ball. It is the only public evening engagement that he has accepted for the remainder of the month.

Ex-mayor Nathan Matthews, chairman of the Finance Commission, who was requested by Mayor Hibbard to draw up a bill for presentation to the Legislature which would protect the city's rights under the Parkman will, which left $5,000,000 for the extension of the park system, has practically completed his work.

If the change can be affected, efforts will be made to have the work done by the Quarantine Department of the Board of Health taken over by the U. S. Government. This change, if affected, would save the city in the vicinity of $30,000 annually.

BIG BLIZZARD BOOMS $200 GOLD RACE

You all known the moss-covered saying about the ill-wind that blows nobody good. The adage proved itself in the huge pile of answers received to-day in the AMERICAN'S $200 gold contest.

Boston was storm bound by yesterday's raging blizzard. Hundreds of persons who couldn't get out of the house put in their otherwise dreary hours by cutting out coupon form blanks and sending in their names and addresses to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

It was a chance well worth taking. Those few minutes of time so occupied and the 2-cent stamp so invested will be considered well spent if it should turn out to bring the writers a good share of $200 in gold.

There is still a chance for YOU, if you get into the contest at once. Do it to-day, before the competition is closed. Write at once. Send in your name and address on the accompanying blank.

As you do so you are invited to answer just as you see fit these two questions:

1—What feature or department in the SUNDAY AMERICAN do you like best and why?

2—What feature or department (idea or suggestion) not now included in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN would you like most to see regularly in the SUNDAY AMERICAN?

A school boy or girl can be a winner under the liberal terms of the contest. It is not handwriting that will figure in the awarding of prizes. It is not fancy literary style that will be a consideration. The contest is not a contest in English composition.

The first prize in the contest is $100 in gold. The second prize is $50 and the third prize is $25 in gold. Then there are five prizes of $5 each.

$200 IDEA BLANK.

TO POST "DEAD BEATS" AT YALE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 18.—Tailors, tobacconists and otehr merchants who subsist chiefly on the Yale trade are planning a central credit bureau, where all students who do not pay their debts shall be listed. The tradesmen will meet Saturday night and formally organize their academic "credit lyonaise!"

Several months ago a merchant asked the Board of Aldermen for some protetcion against students who are "dead beats," but nothing was done.

One tailor to-day looked gloomily at a gilded junior passing with a "prom" girl and said: "See that swell outfit? I furnished it. Wonder when he will pay up?"

Telegraphic Briefs.

NASHVILLE—Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, his son Robin and Ex-Sheriff John D. Sharpe will be placed on trial for the murder of United States Senator Carmack, Wednesday.

SEATTLE—W. L. Seeley, former bank examiner for Illinois; his wife, Mrs. Kate Seeley, and his daughter, Miss Rene Seeley, were found dead in their bathroom to-day. They had been dead since Thursday. The police say Seeley killed his entire family.

ELDORA, Iowa—Lynn Trimble, a restaurant keeper, was killed by a bandit in his place of business at Union, Ia., in the presence of his wife and children. The highwayman escaped and was tracked to Eldora, where his coat and trousers were found in a wagon.

BELLINGHAM, Wash.—The government's million-dollar bridge over the Frazier River at New Westminister is in danger of being swept away by an ice pack.

NEW YORK—Captain Robert De Sanford of the barge Ontaria dropped dead at the wheel of his vessel in Long Island Sound to-day.

SACRAMENTO—A railroad trestle has been carried away between here and Davis, and twenty-five laborers are reported to have been carried down to their death.

NEW YORK—The public service commission's report shows the peril of living in New York city. The traction lines alone killed 441 during the twelve months just ended, and maimed and injured 56,481.

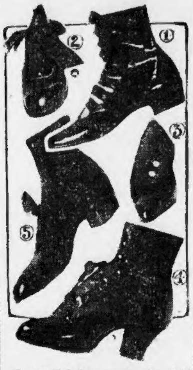
NEW SHOES FOR THE DAINTY FEET OF BOSTON GIRLS



No. 1—High boot sandal with eight attachments for theatres and opera. No. 2—College shoe, tan, with harness stitching; very swagger. No. 3—Notice the big pearl buttons on the suede upper. No. 4—The latest New York idea in high heels. No. 5—Mannish boots for women who like walking.

PRAISE NURSES IN FIRE RESCUE

BIDDEFORD, Me., Jan. 18.—Citizens are to-day praising the heroic work of the house physician, Dr. Ray N. Randall, and Miss Lucy J. Potter, superintendent of nurses, who, assisted by members of the Nurses' Training School, saved seventeen patients from death yesterday when the new $35,000 Trull Homeopathic Hospital was destroyed by fire. Led by the daring doctor, who was forced to put snow on his head, the women nurses entered the burning building time and time again, carrying out helpless patients in their arms and then struggled through a raging blizzard to the nearest house, a quarter of a mile away. Miss Leila M. Kirk, Miss Bertha Reid, Miss K. Ethel Daley, were among those to perform the thrilling rescues.

Dr. Randall, when the last patient had been carried out, dropped exhausted in the door of the hospital and was dragged to safety by the women nurses. The fire loss will reach $35,000. There is $18,000 insurance on the building and $7,000 on the furnishings.

MISS BOSTON'S SPRING SHOES REAL MANNISH

Miss Boston's dainty feet will be clad in quite mannish shoes this Spring if the fair wearer follows the new styles, as forecasted at the annual meeting of the New England Shoe Dealers' Association held in the United States Hotel.

There is one dreadfully swagger last, the "College" shoe, a tan Oxford, with harness stitching. It looks, for all the world, like the masculine footwear affected by Miss Boston's brother or her "next friends."

Then there is a walking boot, made just like a man's shoe, with broad sole, low, flat heel and stout lace. It is designed particularly for the tramping girl, the athletic type.

The shoe men are assembled at the United States Hotel. They represent the largest manufacturers and dealers of the East, and their styles will be the prevailing modes for the coming season.

Quite opposite in type to the walking boot, with its low heel, is the latest New York craze in high heels. This boot has a short patent leather vamp and counter, with patent lace-strip. The heel is very high, but is moulded on graceful lines and will appeal to the feminine fancy, despite all the medical and other denunciation of high heels.

A pretty novelty in full dress wear is the eight-attachment sandal of patent leather. This meant for theatre, opera or other full dress occasions. The eight straps or "attachments" across the ankle will allow the dainty hosiery to peep through coquettishly, an advantage which will be duly appreciated. A girl needs well-shaped, slender ankles, of course, to wear this sandal, as its style calls attention to the ankle particularly.

Another novelty is a patent leather low-cut with suede upper. Two pearl buttons of large size are used. The buttons contrast smartly with the suede leather and give the shoe an unusually attractive appearance.

In all the new styles present many charming effects, which will be highly approved by Miss Boston in her search for suitable protection for her pretty feet.

ANDREWS WINS POINT IN SUIT

Judge Sheldon in the Supreme Court to-day granted Stewart M. Andrews, as plaintiff, permission to amend his declaration in his application for a writ of mandamus to compel the Mines Corporation, Limited, to permit examination of the books.

He owns 9,775 shares of the stock, and says the company is being mismanaged. The corporation was formed under the laws of Delaware in 1905 with a capital of $2,000,000. The shares have a par value of $1.

The Court discovered that the declaration was incomplete when the case was called and granted permission to Andrews to amend it. This necessitated a new service on the officers of the corporation and a postponement.

CLASH WITH MELLEN MADE STEVENS QUIT

John F. Stevens, the former Panama Canal chief, who was slated to succeed Lucius Tuttle as president of the Boston & Maine Railroad and reported retired as vice-president of the New Haven system, is said to be on the "outs" with President Mellen.

The first clash between Mellen and Stevens is said to have come when he carried his vigorous discipline of trainmen to the point that it reached a struggle and brought the Brotherhood leaders on from the West to determine if an immediate strike should not be called. In this crisis, it is said, President Mellen stepped in over his vice-president's head and calmed the indignant operatives.

Stevens resented this interference, and it was not long afterward that he found a way to strike a blow both at President Roosevelt and President Mellen by his published denunciation of the work upon the canal.

Mellen's Rebuke.

President Mellen is said to have rebuked Stevens and to have told him that hereafter New Haven vice-presidents would not be expected to discuss questions of public policy in public, pro or con.

AMERICAN SAILORS WIN SHORE BATTLE

VILLEFRANCE, Jan. 18.—Three American sailors on shore leave were assaulted to-day by a number of hangers-on in a wine shop, and were badly beaten before a party of their comrades rallied to the rescue. Four of the gang were taken prisoners by the American sailors and turned over to the police when they arrived upon the scene. A fifth made his escape.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS AND FINANCIAL NEWS.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET WEAK

Prices on the local market at the opening to-day were fractionally below Saturday's closing.

Copper stocks in London were weak and the same sentiment was shown in New York and Boston. Amalgamated opened at 79⅞, which is a loss of ⅝. Superior, which had been the feature of last week's strength, was off ¼ at 40. Isle Royale was unchanged and Wyandot and Miami had a gain of ⅛ each.

In the general list a somewhat better tone was shown. Agriculturals, Steel and American Telephone, though not active, remained around the opening prices during the first half hour. London Copper was weak, spot being off 1 and futures 17s. 6d.

MOYER IS LOSER IN DAMAGE CLAIM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Supreme Court of the United States held against Charles H. Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners, in an opinion on his appeal for damages against former Governor Peabody, General Sherman M. Bell and Captain Bulkley Wells for illegal imprisonment. The judgment of the Circuit Court was affirmed.

N. Y. CENTRAL LEADS MARKET

BY T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—New York Central was the leader of the stock market in the early trading to-day, chiefly because of the development in connection with Harriman's plan to make it the holding company for Southern Pacific stock. Central, which closed Saturday at 130, sold at 131⅜ in the early trading to-day. Southern Pacific was also advanced and the entire market was strong in sympathy with these movements.

"Soo" stock was strong, as the purchase improved its position in the market. In London American shares were irregular, with New York Central the strong feature.

On the New York curb market mining shares were dull but steady.

B. & M. BONDS PUT ON SALE

Having disposed of the greater part of the $11,700,000 bond issue of the Boston & Maine Railroad, William A. Read & Company of No. 19 Congress street, are offering the remainder of the issue at 105½ and interest—to net 4.10 per cent. They are 4½ per cent. twenty-year bonds, dated April 1, 1909, and due April 1, 1929. Interest is payable in New York or Boston on April and October 1.

These bonds are legal investment for savings banks and insurance companies in Massachusetts and Connecticut and in Maine and New Hampshire. Under the new emergency currency law they are acceptable by the treasury department at Washington as security for additional government deposits in national banks.

William A. Read & Co. have already disposed of $9,000,000 worth of this issue and the remainder, $2,700,000, will be offered for sale at the price given to-day.

William A. Read & Company call attention to the fact that the stock has always been regarded in high favor by conservative investors, and the fact that the Boston & Maine railroad has paid dividends in every year for seventy years, or since it commenced payments in 1838. It is now paying at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on an outstanding issue of $28,271,300.

The bonds are issued by the Boston & Maine to refund short notes and other maturing securities of the company and to reimburse the treasury for expenditures for permanent additions, equipment, second track and other improvements completed or arranged for.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Estimating by the returns of the first ten days of January, the output of Cumberland-Ely Copper Company will be 1,500,000 pounds for the present month, and compares with 1,100,000 pounds produced in December. Latest figures regarding the cost of production indicate that it will not be above 8 cents a pound.

Giroux Consolidated will hold its annual meeting the election of directors will take place, while at a special meeting following the capital stock will be increased to $7,500,000 by the issue of $1,500,000 shares.

Nevada Utah Mines and Smelting will hold their annual meeting in Portland, Me., on February 10. Books close January 27.

The production of Granby during 1908 was 23,639,984 pounds. Following is the yearly production for 1905 to 1908 inclusive:

Year.	Production in lbs.
1908	23,639,984
1907	19,514,000
1906	19,779,000
1905	17,843,300

The enlargement of the furnaces, which will be finished in May, will increase the smelter capacity from 4,500 to 5,000 tons per day, against 3,200 tons at present.

Returns from a car of ore recently taken from the Superior and Boston Company mines below the 550-foot level show 18 per cent. copper and 20 ounces of silver to the ton.

Dispatches from Houghton, Mich., say, It has been announced that the option on the Globe lands, held by the Copper Range Company, are to be abandoned, as the results of the proving of the properties was disappointing.

American Telephone & Telegraph Company convertible 4 per cent. bonds, due 1936, have been admitted to quotation on the New York Stock Exchange.

Directors of the Boston Land Company have declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable February 18.

The Dividend Manual for 1908, showing dividends paid by the leading railroad, industrial and mining companies, has just been issued by Arthur S. Leland & Co.

Boston & Maine Railroad

4½% Twenty-Year Bonds

Due April 1, 1929

Interest payable in New York or Boston April 1 and October 1. Coupon bonds of $1,000 denomination and Registered bonds of $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $50,000. Coupon bonds exchangeable for fully registered bonds.

Legal Investment for Savings Banks and Insurance Companies in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and New Hampshire.

Available for circulation issued under the Emergency Currency Law of May 30, 1908, and acceptable by the Treasury Department at Washington as security for Government deposits in National Banks, when being increased.

Issue approved by the Board of Railroad Commissioners of Massachusetts

In a letter addressed to us giving full particulars of these bonds Mr. Lucius Tuttle, President of the Boston & Maine Railroad, states in substance, among other things, the following:

Under the Laws of Massachusetts the bonds will be secured pro rata under any mortgage that may be executed by the Boston & Maine Railroad and it cannot increase its bonded indebtedness except to an amount equal to the par value of capital stock hereafter issued and any premium received thereon.

The Boston & Maine Railroad has paid dividends in every year for seventy years, and is now paying at the rate of 6% per annum on $30,292,800 outstanding preferred and common shares. The surplus earned over all charges for the five months to Nov. 30, 1908, is nearly equal to a full year's dividend on both classes of stock.

Copies of Mr. Tuttle's letter, giving additional particulars, and the opinion of our counsel, Messrs. Strong & Cadwalader, may be had upon application.

We unhesitatingly recommend these bonds as a well secured investment, and having sold over $9,000,000 of the issue, we offer the unsold portion, subject to sale and change in price, at 105½ and interest, to net 4.10%.

Notes of the Boston & Maine R. R. maturing on May 3rd, next, or prior thereto, will be discounted at the rate of 3¼% to maturity in exchange for these 4½% bonds.

Temporary Certificates of the Railroad are deliverable upon payment with interest discounted on the par value at the rate of 4.10% to April 1st, 1909.

WOMEN RIDE 1,500 MILES ON HORSEBACK

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Jan. 18.—Forced to travel on horseback, their funds being scarce, Mrs. Jane Wellman and her sixteen-year-old daughter Edina have arrived at the University of Arkansas from Mexico, after journeying the entire distance of 1,500 miles in men's saddles. The daughter will matriculate at the university to-morrow.

BRITISH GARRISON PARADES FOR FLEET

VALETTA, Island of Malta, Jan. 18.—The entire English garrison paraded to-day in honor of the American fleet. The Duke of Connaught and the officers of the Illinois, Kearsarge and Wisconsin were on the reviewing stand, and they were frequently cheered by the enthusiastic crowds. The Duke to-night gives an officers' ball at the Valetta Palace.

JOHN L. DENIES REPORT HE WILL GO ABROAD

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

MALONEY MAY MEET FOWLER IN THE MARATHON

JEFFRIES WILL FIGHT IF HE CAN GET IN SHAPE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The tremendous pressure brought to bear on Jeffries for the purpose of making him fight again has drawn the declaration from the former champion which fight followers believe means he will answer the call. Here is Jeffries's statement:

"It's awful to have a big coon the heavyweight champion of the world, lording it over the white man. Maybe I'll see my way clear to give him a run yet.

"But if I do the battle must be fought right over here and preferably in San Francisco. I never will fight again unless I am sure that I can get into my old-time form. That will take a few months to determine. I cannot rush headlong into it. I worked for years and years fighting my way to the top, and it would be a nice thing if I allowed that big coon to catch me off my guard and beat me, wouldn't it?

"I have done a lot of work during the past couple of years that the outside world knows nothing of. I roam out in the hills and hunt and that keeps me in condition. I can soon tell if I will be able to get right again. My wind is very good, considering that I have been doing gym work for only two keeks. If I keep on improving I will have some thing to say very shortly.

Clever Briton Has Tough Bout

DRISCOLL MEETS HAYES

It may be the last chance Hub followers of boxing sport will get to gaze on that peerless little featherweight, Jem Driscoll, when he meets Grover Hayes of Philadelphia at the Armory A. A. to-morrow night, as his next battle will be with Champion Abe Attell for the world's title, and the result of that match will have much to do with Driscoll's future career.

It will be the Englishman's third appearance in the local ring. His decisive defeat of Charley Griffin and his victory over Matty Baldwin presented an opportunity to size the marvel up pretty well, but he will get the best tests yet when he meets Hayes, for the stocky battler who was seen here with Matty Baldwin will force Driscoll to the last bit of his strength. There is no question who is the stronger between the two, and if Hayes can manage to land often he will make it interesting for his clever opponent.

As Driscoll has already met Hayes twice in six-round bouts in Philadelphia, he knows the latter's style and is aware that he faces one of the toughest in his class. Hayes had no trouble in staying with Driscoll in the two short bouts, and ever since has been after one of longer distance, and the twelve rounds suits him nicely, as he believes that by his hard infighting that he can wear Driscoll down so that he will lose much of his wonderful cleverness.

Driscoll will naturally be the popular choice against Hayes because of his sensational showing since he came to America and his long period of successes is expected to extend till he faces Abe Attell.

The only weakness that has been discovered in the Briton's fighting armament is his inability to hit with crushing force, a fault common to men in the featherweight division. In his fights with Baldwin and Hayes, Driscoll landed as he pleased and smothered the blows of his opponents with the greatest ease. But at no time did he come close to stopping either man. He forced them to clinch and stall at times, but seemed unable to deliver a knockout punch. His punches are stinging ones, one hand being as good as the other, but it is a question if he hits with the force that does Attell. Driscoll has one clean knockout to his credit in this country, he having stopped Charley Griffin.

Judging from Attell's fights with Moran, it is doubtful if the featherweight championship can be fairly and decisively decided except in a forty-five-round or a finish bout. Attell and Driscoll should be made to go the Marathon route in order to assure a winner.

SULLY'S PAD IS PATENTED

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Billy Sullivan, the star backstop of the White Sox and talked of as the next manager of the team, has been recognized by the United States government as an inventor. "Sully" has written to a friend that he has been granted a pattern on a catcher's pad that he used all of last Summer, and loaned many times to the catchers of other teams that played against the Sox.

The new protector is not a wind pad, as the catcher's pads of the past have been. It is made of a heavy substances that pulls around the catcher into a V shape when adjusted, and the force of the ball is always nullified by the glancing direction that it is given.

The new pad does not need to be blown up between every innings, and it is a much safer device for the player.

LAVE CROSS AT SHAMOKIN.

SHAMOKIN, Jan. 18.—The local Atlantic League Baseball Association to-day received word from Lave Cross at Cleveland, O., formerly captain of the Philadelphia Athletics, that he would accept the captaincy and players' management of the local team for the ensuing season. He is in good condition and expects to put up a better game than that of last year here.

The early part of the 1908 season he contracted malaria at New Orleans, effects of which illness interfered considerably in his baseball playing.

CRISS MAY BE A REGULAR

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 18.—One of the problems Manager James McAleer of the Browns will be asked to solve next Spring is what to do with Dode Criss, his big substitute pitcher, who is the champion batsman of the American League. He is a player who excels all others as a hitter, but is sadly deficient as a pitcher or a fielder. Base hits are too valuable in a game to leave him idle on the bench, and McAleer is scheming some way to work his big batter into the game as a regular.

HORSE NEWS TRACK GOSSIP

Fifteen horses were burned in the fire which destroyed the stable of Irving C. Trafant, in Bath, Me., recently. The fire involved a loss of about $9,000, and every horse was destroyed.

Twelve horses, nine trotters and three pacers, lowered or equaled twenty-two of the accepted world's records during the season of 1908.

L. V. Harkness purchased the farm Walnut Hall (now famous as a great trotting horse nursery) in 1892. Its former owner was Mrs. Mary S. Weiser, and Walnut Hall proper then contained 398 acres.

Good starters and good judges help to make good races.

Illinois' contribution to the list of eminent racehorses for 1908 was a fine one. Minor Heir (1:59½), Hedgewood Boy (2:02¼) and Citation (2:01¾) are from the "Sucker State."

The horse that tries to win is the one we all like best! We also like that brand of a driver.

The Winter has not been extremely cold in the West, and the absence of the old-time blizzard has saved the stock.

D. A. Sprague, of South Charleston, O., owns the pacing stallion Colonel Colt (2:10¼). Colonel Colt is a peculiarly marked horse, having a perfect interrogation point, in white, that extends from a point below the forelock to the tip of the nose.

In breeding, all things else being equal, patronize the stallion whose owner makes the greatest effort to keep him before the public, thereby making a market for your colts.

McKaig Simmons (2:07¼) is touted as a sure 2:03 pacer. He is owned by Clayton Brothers, of Quincy, O., and will be raced again this season.

M. E. McHenry drove, and won, his first race at Galva, Ill., July 4, 1879. The track was the public square, the turns being thrown up for the occasion.

The White River Stock Farm, Muncie, Ind., recently purchased the pacing mare Meadow Brook. It is said that Meadow Brook was timed in a race in 2:10, 2:07½ and 2:07.

Ed Geers drove his first race at Lebanon, Tenn., in 1872, winning with Little Dave, the fastest heat of which was 3:07.

John Taylor (2:08¼), owned by E. W. Swisher of Columbus, O., is considered one of the best matinee trotters in the country. John Taylor won the M. & M. in 1903.

NEW DOGS IN HUB SHOW

Frank F. Dole, superintendent of the New England Kennel Club show to be held in Mechanics building, February 22, 23, 24 and 25, is home after a visit to a number of the largest kennel owners in the country. For the past few weeks Mr. Dole has been traveling about the country for the purpose of getting entries for the twenty-fifth annual of the club and has succeeded in interesting a number of exhibitors from distant parts who have never before shown their dogs in Boston.

In addition he has, too, received a number of additional specials from the big specialty clubs which will not be in the premium list on account of the fact that the donations were made after the list had gone to the printer. This list, by the way, will be the biggest ever offered for a New England show and contains a number of valuable cups and trophies, in addition to the large number of classes in which money, ribbons and medals are to be awarded.

BOXING BITS OF NEWS

The different boxing clubs in New York are going to bar heavyweight boxers in the future.

Pacific coast sports are clamoring for a bout between Stanley Ketchel and Sam Langford, and they will not rest until they see these two men in the same ring.

Stanley Ketchel, the middleweight champion, says that if the American public demands it he will meet Johnson, but all other negroes are barred.

Since the question of Jeffries' re-entry into the ring arose, quite a few experts are of the opinion that Jim is feeling himself out and if he finds himself able to get down to a reasonable weight he may take Johnson on. Meanwhile he has everyone guessing while he is doing his trying-out stunts.

Young Corbett and Harry Ferns will battle twenty-five rounds at New Orleans on Sunday afternoon, January 24. They were originally booked to box last night, but the date was changed to give Ferns a chance to get in shape for the long grind. They weigh in at 135 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Jim Barry will be back next week, after a long stay at Los Angeles, where he won over Jim Flynn in ten rounds and lost to Al Kaufman in thirty-nine. In the latter fight Barry injured both his hands, but he reports them in good shape again. Barry is anxious to take on some of the Eastern heavies, and he will likely start in two weeks with Jim Stewart, who looks to have a chance with him.

Tommy Murphy, the lightweight, and Owen Moran, the clever English featherweight, have been matched to meet for ten rounds in the main event at the next stag of the National A. C., New York, on Wednesday night.

NEW STAR FOR PENN.

Penn's track team will be greatly strengthened this spring by the addition of Ralph Baker, the former Swarthmore star track athlete. Baker, who is now a second-year man in the law school of the university, has finally decided to come out and try for the indoor relay team, which will enter their first meet on January 25. While at Swarthmore Baker made quite a record for himself as a half-miler and has the great distinction of being the youngest athlete to score in the intercollegiate track meet, finishing third place in the half-mile run at Cambridge in 1906, when he was but sixteen years of age. Again in 1907 he succeeded in finishing in fourth place in the half-mile. Last year Baker was not eligible to run for Penn on account of the one-year residence rule, but this year he will be a valuable man, as so many of the last year's Red and Blue team have graduated.

NEW CUE PHENOM.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—George Sutton claims to have discovered a new billiard "phenom." James B. Crookston of Pittsburg is destined to be a champion within two years, according to the older master of the game, who says Crookston has a masterful stroke, superior to his own in driving, and that with intelligence and observation his possibilities are unlimited.

SYRACUSE TO MEET INDIANS

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 18.—It was announced that Syracuse University and the Carlisle Indians will hold a dual track meet and baseball game in this city, May 6. This is the third time that the double athletic event has been arranged for neutral ground in this city.

John L. Sullivan's Column

That's a pipe about my making a final tour of the world. I don't say I never will make the grand tour again, but I do say I have made no plans for such a tour and the idea has not entered my mind for years. Where the report came from I have no means of knowing, but some of the other Boston newspapers played it up big on Friday, and while I was over to the theatre doing my stunt one of my confreres on the BOSTON AMERICAN ran in an item to the same effect. I don't know whether the joke is on him or on me, but the fact remains I am not thinking of touring the world.

Some of the papers had the whole thing laid out for me. I was to finally wind up in England and spar with Charlie Mitchell and Tug Wilson and, in fact, meet all the old-timers I battled with when I was in my prime. Well, there is nothing in it. I am simply going to the coast in a few weeks but I'm not going out of the country.

A report of this kind is harmless. It hurts nobody. It has gone all over the country by this time and most everybody will believe it. It doesn't annoy me any, but in the old days the newspapers used to print a lot of stuff about me that was no more true than this latest piece of information that I was going on a grand tour.

Everytime I struck a new town the reporters would hand out the most outrageous stories about me, and the editors used to fall for it. I suppose they thought it made good reading, but believe me, there wasn't 5 per cent. of truth in the reports. There hasn't been very much of it in the last twenty years, but from the time I defeated Paddy Ryan until I retired from the ring the newspapers handed me some hot ones.

I am in Washington this week, but you will find my views in the BOSTON AMERICAN just the same. Send in your questions and I will answer them. The leased wire service of this newspaper extends to every city I visit and I am constantly in communication with this office.

I want to say a word to my correspondents. Sign your letters with your full name and address. This is not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. I want to know who are asking the questions. Some man signing himself "Reader" and giving no other name or address may ask me a question that will take an hour or two to look up in the records. You can't expect me to give that much of my time to a man who will not sign his name. Also don't forget that all scurrilous letters go to the waste paper basket; in fact, I don't even see them. My assistants tear them up as fast as received. I am conducting a serious column in this newspaper. If you don't agree with what I say, tell me so, but don't get nasty about it. The fact that I might give as my opinion that Jeffries could defeat Johnson or that Johnson could defeat Jeffries, does not call for a letter full of abuse. Be decent about it; that's all I ask.

John L. Sullivan:
Dear Sir—Does it go on record as a knockout if a fighter's second throws a towel into the ring?
Plainfield, Ct. F. R.

It goes as a knockout. You should read this column very carefully, as the same question has twice been answered recently.

John L. Sullivan:
Dear Sir—In what streets in New York city are the cars run by cable? B. J. E.
Moosup, Ct.

I only answer questions relating to sporting matters. Write to some New York newspaper.

John L. Sullivan:
Dear Sir—When did Jeffries become champion and how old was he? R. D.
Boston.

He became champion when he defeated Fitzsimmons, June 9, 1899. He was twenty-four years old at the time.

John L. Sullivan:
Dear Sir—In what year did the Griffin-Donovan battery play on the Boston Americans? P. S.
Charlestown.

There never was such a battery on the Boston Americans.

Constant Reader, New Bedford—No attention paid to anonymous letters. Sign your full name if you want an answer, and you will have to write your letter all over again as it is in the waste paper basket.]

Circerone, Arlington—Maybe you are right. I hadn't thought of it.

NOTED TRAINER SHIFTS TRACKS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 18.—Trainer C. A. Durfee has shipped his stable of trotters from Pleasanton to the track here, and will take up a temporary residence at his old home for the next six months or so. A few months ago he leased his Oakland residence for a year and probably will not return until the lease has expired. Mr. Durfee took with him the stallion Almaden, two-year-old record 2:22¼, made in the Breeders' Futurity of that year, which he won. Almaden also won the Occident Stake the following year, but did not have to reduce his record. He has now grown into the biggest little horse in the country and will be trained for a campaign next Summer. He looks very much like one of the sure 2:10 trotters for 1909.

Mr. Durfee also takes with him the two three-year-old trotters of this year, Dr. Lecco, by Lecco, 2:09¾, and Helen Stiles, by Sidney Dillon. If these three trotters come up to what is expected of them they will probably be in Will Durfee's campaigning stable of 1909 and race on the other side of the Rocky Mountains.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

It is a peculiar fact that all of the Boston outfielders' names begin with B, as witness Beck, Bates, Beaumont, Browne and Becker. Boston Baked Beans also all begin with B's.

With Roger Bresnahan gone, McGraw will have to depend on Schlei and Needham to do the backstopping. It will take a better man than these two to cop the pennant for the team.

Uncle Cy Young stepped up at the right moment with his year's contract and stopped those wild rumors of his being let go by the Red Sox.

Kickers on the ball field may be interested to know that Harry Truby, just appointed a National League umpire, weighs 200 pounds and is a skilled boxer. Truby has knocked out many amateurs in private bouts and is game to the core. He does not pose as a fighter, however.

Clark Griffith, after a visit the other day to Cincinnati's ball park, decided to have the grandstand painted green so that it would be easier for the outfielders to judge fly balls. Since then the Porkville fans have been informed in no uncertain terms that the Reds have the pennant clinched.

Manager McGraw, of the Giants, wants to get rid of "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity again. He wanted to release this player last season, but no club was willing to shoulder the responsibility of paying his big salary. After Joe was put on the market he pitched better ball than ever, and his showing for the season was eleven games won and seven lost, a very creditable showing for any twirler. However, they want to part with "Mac," and if all the major league clubs pass him up he will go to the minors. Such is the reward for faithful service!

"Big Chief" Bender, of Philadelphia, shot the high gun of the day at the Ringing Hill Gun Club's largest shoot, killing 32 of his 33 birds. He lost his second bird in falling dead out of bounds. Interstate rules governed the match, which was largely attended by marksmen from Philadelphia, Norristown, Reading, Pottstown, Lansdale and the surrounding country. Bender tied in the 25-bird handicap shoot.

George Moriarty's wish has been granted. Jennings has been after the Yanks' utility man for many weeks, but not until yesterday did he offer enough money for him.

Charley Comiskey is planning elevators, an auto drive and flower beds for his new park. He will probably insist that his players wear silk hose also.

The Detroit club has sent out word to its players that they must gather on February 6 to start for San Antonio. Guess Jennings must be strong for that early stuff.

St. Louis fans are worrying themselves to death concerning Rube Waddell's constitution. Last week he was trainer of Smallwood, built a track, acted as a sporting editor, bought a dog, took part in an all-day shooting match, played a game of association football and touched Hedges for a ten-spot.

Frank Chance is expected in Chicago in a few days to make plans for the Spring training trip of the Cubs and to turn the feud which now exists between him and little Chawles into a permanent peace.

There are new honors just heaped on Rube Waddell. A bunch of baseball stars edited a St. Louis sporting page last week, but that got out by his Rubelets was decided by a committee to be the nearest to the recognized standard.

White Champ Starts Stage Work

JEFF GETS INTO ACTION

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—Crowded to the doors was the Wigwam Theatre, where Jim Jeffries, the white heavyweight champion of the world, began his theatrical tour which may eventually put him in the ring against Jack Johnson in a match for the title.

It was the grandest ovation ever meted out to a gladiator of the prize ring who had been absent for four years, and the old warrior was considerably warmed up over the attention showered upon him.

Out in the street many could not get inside to see the performance of the retired champion and found consolation in cheering him and talking of the prospects of a future match with Johnson.

When Jeff appeared on the stage in a three-round sketch with Sam Berger, a mighty cheer shook the rafters.

Is a Bit Weighty.

The onlookers were amazed by the amount of speed Jeff showed in such a short period. He was there with that remarkable quickness of delivery which made him such a terror in former days, and in spite of his 260 pounds, which weight Jeff said he scaled, it was evident that by judicious training that he could get down to proper form in time.

Of course, he did not let Berger have it all his own way at that. He returned one punch out of an average of three received and he disarranged Berger's aim many times by clever ducking and drawing away.

At one point in the opening spasm Jim gave the back scenery a dig with his elbow, and it looked for a moment as if the top hamper stage would come tumbling to the floor. In the main, though, he was both neat and nimble, and it is not romancing to say his agility was remarkable for a ring man who has been idle so long.

Berger Looked Frightened.

There was a bit of a clinch in that first round, and a look of wonderment and apprehension came into Berger's eyes as the big fellow muzzled his wrist with one hand and grabbed the back of Sammy's neck with the other. Berger looked about as happy as a baby calf in the clutch of a full grown grizzly, but when Jeffries temporarily severe look widened into a wholesouled grin, Sam became happy again and cut loose with youthful abandon. But it was all coming back to Jeffries now, and he dipped under Sammy's leads in such timely way that Sam missed oftener than he landed.

They went three short rounds, and Jeffries, for reasons already explained, contented himself principally with ducking and dodging. Once in the second round he forgot himself, or, it may be that Sam was guilty of contributory negligence. In any case, Jeffries's big gloved fist came in with an unkind uppercut and caught Sam just about the waist line. Sam acknowledged the visitation with a gasp. In the third round the men were demonstrative, although the damage done was no greater than in the other brief spells of sparring. Jeff thudded the head and Sam shrank phantom uppercuts. Then they quickened by mutual consent and cuffed each other lightly around the stage, Berger finally falling in a stagy manner as though from a smash of a glove.

Jeff Still Fast on His Feet.

It was an amusing display, and it made several things clear. Big Jeffries is still able to step around at a notably brisk pace and his ideas of ducking and sidestepping and pulling away are intact. If his hitting department is as well preserved as his other fighting talent he has nothing to fear from Jack Johnson or any heavyweight living.

Jeffries was well satisfied with the way he had carried himself through the performances, but he had never a word of encouragement to offer as to his plans for invading the prize ring. At the same time, he was not by any means as emphatic in voicing his determination to remain in retirement.

In all probability, Jeffries is trying to get a line on himself. In addition to his stage work, he will engage in exercise daily, and if he finds himself rounding into condition he will soon announce his readiness to box for the world's championship.

When Jim Jeffries stepped off the Oakland boat on his arrival from Los Angeles to fill his sparring engagement at the Wigwam Theatre he had an inkling of what was in store for him. "Oh, you $3,000 beauty!" shouted one newsboy.

"Say, won't you fight Johnson, Jim?" yelled another. And then each of the urchins tried to surpass the others in the matter of getting off something original.

Jeffries smiled good-naturedly, and had the mien and bearing of a man who is holding a secret from his tormentors.

Looks in Good Shape.

Jeffries looked great after his one week's exercise in Los Angeles. He intends to keep along with a mild form of training, even though he is not prepared to say that there will be a fight with Jack Johnson at the end of it.

"I expect to do a little road work while up here, but guess it will be too muddy," said Jeffries. "I will put in some time at handball and it wont be long before I am in pretty fair condition."

"Did you box at all at Los Angeles?"

"No, I have not had on a boxing glove for years, and I am not going to rehearse with Sam Berger, as some of the folks seem to think. When I got on the Wigwam stage to-day I encased my hands in gloves for the first time since my retirement. I am feeling first-rate, considering. I have cut out cigars and highballs and am going to take good care of myself."

HORSEMAN IN TAFT'S CABINET

Philander C. Knox, who will be Secretary of State in the cabinet of President Taft, was known as a lover of the light harness horse in Pittsburg before he filled so large a place as now in the public eye. He drove on the road in single and double harness and spent money with a liberal hand to secure the best trotters in the market. At Washington he was able to discuss breeding and development questions with such distinguished breeders as Leland Stanford, Benjamin F. Tracy, Joseph C. Sibley and Senator Bailey, and he was generally recognized as the loyal advocate of clean, upbuilding methods.

President Taft is an admirer of the saddle horse which carries the blood of the trotter and the thoroughbred, and his sympathies, like those of Mr. Knox, will be with movements to keep the horse of utility and pleasure to the front.

General Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, and who was with Mr. Taft in the Philippines, was brought up in a trotting-horse atmosphere, being the son of William Edwards, the president of the Cleveland Driving Park, in its history-making days, and we may look for him to do his part in promoting breeding industries. In the eyes of General Edwards there is no glory like the glory of Maud S., because he witnessed her record-breaking performances at Cleveland.

The sentiment of the administration which will begin March 4 is favorable to the horse which represents a steady elevation of platforms, and ambitious breeders should take a brighter view of the future.

SCHEDULE MEN BEGIN SESSION

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 18.—The joint schedule committee of the American and National Leagues this morning began the work of arranging the season's playing dates. The committee will not finish its labors until to-night. It is not believed that the number of games to be played this season will be less than played last year.

It is probable that the American League will open the season in St. Louis, Philadelphia, Washington and either Detroit or Cleveland, while the National League will start the campaign in New York, Boston, Cincinnati and Chicago.

The holiday dates will probably be apportioned as follows:

May 30—American League at Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago and Cleveland. National League at Boston, New York, Pittsburg and St. Louis.

July 4—American League at Boston, New York, St. Louis, Cleveland. National League at Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Pittsburg, Chicago.

Labor Day—American League at New York, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Detroit. National League at New York, Boston, Pittsburg and either Chicago or Cincinnati.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

AUTO IS KING IN GOTHAM AT BIG SHOW

BY J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—One thing which impresses the visitor to the motor show now being held in Madison Square Garden is the advance that has been made during the past twelve months in self-steering devices. A year ago but one manufacturer equipped his stock car with a self starting (correct) device. At this show several were seen, they all being among the higher-priced cars.

These devices are always a source of interest to the motor wise, who are confident that the day of the general adoption of the same is not far distant, although of course it will be some years before they are to be found as the regular equipment on cars selling for less than $2,500. There is much of interest to be seen at this the ninth annual national show, and it will take some little time to thoroughly inspect the several lines of pleasure and commercial vehicles not to mention long lines of sundries and accessories.

Only One Steam Car.

Many of the parts in the better known makes of car appear to be almost exactly the same as are used on other cars of the same grades. In other words it is a day of standardization. There is but one line of steam cars shown in the building and that is made by the White company.

Here six of the new White steamers are shown, three of them being model "M" 40-horsepower cars, and three, model "O" 20-horsepower cars. The model "M" is shown with a limousine body, with a touring body and with a runabout body. The touring body is a five-passenger car and may be described as a compromise between the standard seven-passenger Pullman body and the prevailing style of "Toy Tonneau." The chassis of the runabout embodies some modifications as compared with the chassis of the other cars.

Improvement in Weight.

The number of parts is reduced almost to a half of these formerly used, considerable weight is saved, all eccentrics are done away with and the cylinders are brought close together permitting the use of a short one piece crank shaft, with but two main bearings. The pumps are driven from the valve mechanism, and in this respect as well the engine construction is simplified. Piston valves are used for both high and low pressure cylinders, whereas in former models, a piston valve was used only on the high pressure cylinders. The engine, for the first time is fitted with relief valves which allow the water to escape readily from the cylinders when starting "cold."

From the Boston office Messrs. Schwank, Hathaway or Stone are in attendance representing the New England territory.

The Winton exhibit as heretofore is one of the most attractive in the show, consisting as it does entirely of Big and Little Sixes in roadsters, tourabouts, touring cars and limousines. This year the company makes but two chassis, they being exact counterparts of the 1908 sixes in design, construction, quality of material and character of workmanship. The car differs from its immediate predecessor chiefly in its newly-designed body, and the simplification of its lubricating system.

A Novelty in Engines.

For the third year in succession the Franklin has the same exhibition space at the show. It is on the main floor and is a spot which those frequenters of the show who are interested in air cooling and its possibilities have come to know.

One of the novelties of the exhibit is a Franklin engine, so cut open as to reveal the entire working of the cylinders and valves. This makes easy the undertaking of how an air-cooled motor of this type operates in the production of power.

The exhibit of the Cadillac Motor Car Company consists of three types of their new $1,400 Cadillac "thirty," a five-passenger touring car, a four-passenger demi-tonneau and a three-passenger roadster.

SIX-DAY FOOT RACE PLANNED

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The craze for Marathon races in and out of doors has evidently prompted some energetic promoters who will do business in the name of the International Sports Company of this city to hire Madison Square Garden for the week beginning March 7 at midnight for an old-fashioned six days' go-as-you-please race. It is planned to have thirty-six runners, divided into eighteen teams, who will go after $5,000 in cash prizes.

The race will be an international affair, it is said, with representatives of America, England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Italy, Germany, France, Russia, Belgium, Brazil, Holland, Africa, Canada, Spain, Austria, Japan, China and the Philippines.

It is said that America will have three teams in the race, and that there may be one from the United States army. The American teams will represent New York, Chicago and California. Not since the new garden was opened has there been a six days' race of this kind.

FREDDIE WELSH OFFERS TO BET DANE $5,000

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 18.—Freddie Welsh has thrown a bombshell into the lightweight division. In his determination to plant the British flag at the head of the 133-pound class, the little Englishman to-night challenged Battling Nelson for a championship battle, offering the Dane a side bet of $5,000. Unless Nelson takes heed of the challenge inside of the next thirty days, Welsh states that he will claim the world's lightweight championship and defend the title at 133 pounds ringside, against all comers. The British champion posted a check for $1,000 with the writer as a deposit to bind the match the minute that Nelson shows a disposition to talk fight.

Welsh has evidently been contemplating this move for many days, as he has prepared a written argument that is a gem so far as paving the way to the jumping of a world's championship claim is concerned. In this document the little foreigner says:

"All the sporting world knows that Battling Nelson has practically retired. He wants to do anything else now besides fighting. The public will stand for a champion remaining idle just so long and no longer. Nelson must fight again soon or come out and honestly declare that he has gone into retirement.

"It is admitted by all the Los Angeles experts that Packey McFarland was not at his best last Friday when he made 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. If Packey still maintains that he can make the legitimate lightweight limit—133 pounds ringside—then my $5,000 side bet goes for him.

"As for Dick Hyland, here is a proposition that he should jump at if he believes that he has a chance with me. I will bet him $1,000 to $500 on the general result, and will take him on before the Pacific A. C. in this city within ten days after by meeting with George Memsic."

It seems highly probable that Welsh will be a very busy young man for the next few days to come. Will Packy McFarland and Harry Gilmore, Jr., have something to say to-morrow morning? They will.

BASEBALL BODY SERVES NOTICE

CINCINNATI, Jan. 18.—The National to all major league clubs regarding a change in the time at which waivers can be asked on purchased players, as decided upon last Monday at the meeting of the Baseball Commission has issued a notice commission in this city.

In the future no waivers shall be asked by any major league club for purchased minor league players previous to Dec. 1, following such purchase, except where the player purchased is for immediate use and joins the purchasing club and has been under contract for at least ten days and participated in at least one game with such club. When a major league club asks for a waiver to a purchased minor league player the president of the league containing such club shall immediately notify by wire the president of the opposite league thereof and the president of the said opposite league shall be required within three days to either waive claim to such player or negotiate for his services for the particular club in his league desiring the same; the claim, however, of any club in the league seeking the waiver to have precedence over the claim of any club in the opposite league.

BENDER CLEANS OUT SALOON

There is a swell cafe in Washington which draws the color line so deep that any one who crosses does so at his peril. One afternoon last year the Athletics were playing there when a rather nice looking, well-dressed man walked in and quietly asked for a seltzer lemonade. The proprietor, who happened to be standing near, took one look and remarked softly:

"Screw, dig—you ought to know better."

The young man looked surprised and said: "I ordered a seltzer lemonade."

"Get out now," remarked the proprietor. "Go quietly. You're not allowed."

The young man looked puzzled, then annoyed, then repeated the order.

"If you insist on trouble, all right," said the proprietor, and he gave a signal. Two burly waiters rushed to the scene. A straight left laid one on his back, a right jab bounced the other among the rare bric-a-brac. The bartender joined and sat down in a costly vase. The proprietor leaped forward and hit the wall so hard he knocked a picture down and smashed it. Waiters and others rushed to the scene.

Five minutes later the young man landed out in Pennsylvania avenue, a bit mussed up. He stood looking in at the wreckage, where waiters slowly were getting onto their feet and rubbing sore spots, brushed some dust off the lapel of his coat and muttered to himself:

"If they'd have waited a minute I'd have told them I was an Indian."

Then Mr. Bender, the star twirler, who played football at Carlisle, walked softly away.

WHEN CY YOUNG GOT K. O. ON ALTIZER

When Altizer, now with the White Sox, first joined the American League he was something of a sensation with the stick. He had a habit of standing in the rear of the batter's box, and just as the pitcher started to deliver the ball Dave would take a hop, step and jump and meet it several feet in front of the plate, before it started to break.

Several weeks after he joined Washington, Boston was playing in that city, and Cy Young was doing the pitching. Altizer stepped in on several of Cy's fast ones, and luckily escaped from getting hurt by fouling them off. Cy, who bears no ill-will toward any player, warned Altizer about the chance he was taking, but Dave was fresh and full of pepper at the time, so he gave Cy only the laugh for his well-intended advice.

The third time up Dave stepped into what he thought was a curved ball, but it didn't break as Altizer thought it would. Instead of hitting his bat, the ball struck Altizer on the head and put him down for the count. He was carried from the field in an unconscious condition, and spent several weeks in the hospital, fears for a time being entertained for his recovery. Never after that did he take such chances, and the blow had a bad effect on him, for he never hit as well after the injury.

JOHN A. LAWSON, FAMOUS SHOT, NOW AT SIEGEL STORE

John A. Lawson, who is the manager of the sporting goods department of the Henry Siegel store, the largest of its kind in New England, is a fine rifle shot, as the recent records made by him at the Sportsmen's Show indicate. He has a collection of trophies which few sportsmen have equalled and his medals are highly prized by the men who show their skill with a gun.

He holds the distinguished marksman medal given in Wisconsin for the year 1898 and the famous Elder cup of New Brunswick. The cup had to be won three successive times to become the property of the winner, and he was the first to gain possession of the trophy in forty-one years of competition for it.

Mr. Lawson is a member of the Guides and Tourist Association of New Brunswick. Mr. Lawson has as head of his gun department in the Siegel store the experienced old Maine guide, H. O. Wellman, a master of gun and ammunition lore. More than that, he knows every foot of the big game country in Maine and New Brunswick.

Mr. Lawson was born in Fredericton, N. B., the home of some of the best marksmen in the world.

SNOW SPOILS THE SKATING

The weather is just right for skating, out outside of the involuntary sliding on the icy sidewalks and streets there will not be much of the steel blade sport to-day. The snow which fell so long Sunday has given the ponds, lakes and rivers a thick coating and crusting, and scrapers must be employed before there can be any real sport.

As the cold weather will hold out for a few days, there should be splendid skating for the rest of the week. Jamaica Pond will be scraped to-day just as soon as the caretakers can get around to it.

Meanwhile the kids who own flexible flyers and double-runners are in their glory, for it's good coasting weather and they will be at it for keeps after school this afternoon and to-night.

HALF MILLION DIE OF OPIUM

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 18.—"Half a million suicides are caused each year by opium," declares the Rev. A. S. Gregg of the International Reform Bureau, with reference to the opium conference which begins its sessions at Shanghai, February 1. In an official statement to the congress Dr. Thwing, secretary of the reform bureau, states that he has obtained statistics that in a population of 580,000, the proportion of the population using opium is from 20 to 80 per cent.

LABOR

At the meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union yesterday the retiring president, Patrick Maloney, was presented with an engrossed and handsomely framed set of resolutions, expressing the well wishes of his fellow-delegates. Franklin H. Wentworth of Electrical Workers' No. 103, was the educational hour speaker, having as a subject the "Labor Press."

LABOR NOTES.

Coal Teamsters and Helpers No. 68 will have an educational hour at each meeting during the coming year. John J. Fenton, John T. Cooper and John Garrity are a committee to make the arrangements. John T. Cashman of Painters' Union No. 11 will be the speaker next Sunday.

S. M. Thompson of Hyde Park machinists' union was yesterday re-elected president of District 19 of International Machinists' Association. Miss Margaret Foley of Woman's Suffrage League addressed the delegates on the question of universal suffrage for women. The delegates indorsed a set of resolutions favoring the project.

New England Bartenders, Waiters and Cooks are in convention at Hartford, Ct. Richard W. Garrity, president, James J. English, secretary, and John J. Conley, agent of Boston Bartenders' Union No. 77, and Joseph C. Laycock, President John Carney and John T. Kelley of Boston Waiters' Union No. 80 are the Boston delegates.

The annual ball of Structural Iron Workers No. 7 will be held to-night at Paine Memorial Hall, No. 9 Appleton street.

The semi-annual convention of the Massachusetts State Council of Carpenters began to-day at Lynn.

The Lasters No. 22 will install officers to-night at No. 614 Tremont street.

The Massachusetts Savings Bank Insurance League will meet to-night at Wells Memorial building.

National President Michael F. O'Brien will speak to-night at a smoke talk of the Metropolitan Park employes in Bailey Hall, Malden.

HALL OF FAME SLIGHT TO POE IS EXPLAINED

With the rest of the country the anniversary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe will be observed in Boston to-morrow. Julia Ward Howe will reside at commemorative exercises under the auspices of the Boston Authors' Club at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Robert Treat Paine will open the International Poe Association exercises at 8 o'clock in the evening in Jacob Sleeper Hall, No. 688 Boylston street.

Poe's anniversary has recalled the failure of the electors of The Hall of Fame in New York to give him a tablet there with the other American immortals, and several of the electors have recently explained their vote on the status of the poet.

President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale says he thinks the electors as "practical, healthy men" were indifferent to Poe's claims because everything he wrote reads like the work of an intemperate man and one who never paid his debts.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson of Cambridge said he voted for Poe and would do it again.

George F. Swain of Technology said the vote, under the circumstances, was as wise as any vote could be.

James Ford Rhodes of Boston, who voted against Poe, said he would surely be chosen at the next election. He said Edmund Clarence Stedman, who died wondering why Poe had not been chosen, had converted him to his view, and he will vote for the creator of "The Raven" if ever opportunity again affords.

Henry Wade Rogers of Yale said he had never been able to understand why Poe had not been elected. He says he was deserving of the honor, and he would vote for him every time until he is chosen.

SKULL BROKEN; WORKED A WEEK

With his skull fractured so badly that the doctors believe he will die, Michael Clougherty of Second street, South Boston, worked steadily on the docks from Saturday a week ago until last Saturday before he succumbed to the pains in his head and consented to go to a hospital.

"Why, the man's skull is fractured," exclaimed the doctor when Clougherty was examined. "He may die." The doctors also declared it to be one of most wonderful cases of endurance on record.

Then the story of a fight with Larry McCann, who lives in the same neighborhood came out. McCann was arrested, arraigned in court to-day and held in $1,000 bail.

KENTUCKY BEAUTY AND GRIDIRON HERO SHE IS TO MARRY

Miss Elizabeth Sherley and "Tom" Shevlin, principals in football romance.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 18.—"Big Tom" Shevlin, former Yale football star, is at last really to wed Elizabeth Sherley, the famous Kentucky belle.

Shevlin wooed football fashion, and she capitulated in November of 1905, only to break the troth a month later because her giant fiance was too jealous of the attentions other men paid her.

Shevlin went to Europe in a rage, returned, still smarting, and a little later it was announced that he would marry Miss Vera Gilbert, daughter of the architect of Riverside Drive. When that love affair fell through, along with the denials of the lady's parents, Shevlin gave up two years to business in Minneapolis and then sought again the pretty girl in the box. Evidently Miss Sherley hadn't forgotten him, for her mother, Mrs. Branin Sherley, yesterday gave out the news of the second engagement.

SHOOTS WIFE, ENDS LIFE AS POLICE ARRIVE

LOWELL, Jan. 18.—Breaking into the house where his wife was living, Paul Dion, aged twenty-nine years, a former bicycle rider, shot her, threatened to shoot others who attempted to save her and then turned his gun on himself early to-day. He died at St. Joseph's Hospital a few hours after the shooting. Mrs. Dion, who is twenty-four years old, will recover, the physicians say.

Dion and his wife were married last April, and separated after three months. Mrs. Dion has been living at the home of her mother, No. 116 Common street. Dion has made frequent attempts to see her, but was unable to get into the house until early to-day, when he found the house unguarded. He rushed to his wife's room on the second floor and fired twice, wounding her in the head and arm.

Mrs. Lizotte and Miss Jennie Lizotte, mother and sister of Mrs. Dion, rushed to the rescue, but when they reached Mrs. Dion's room, Dion covered them with his revolver, crying he would shoot them unless they kept away. One of the women sent an alarm to police headquarters and as an officer was climbing the stairs Dion shot himself.

PROBE WELD'S HOTEL DEATH

Friends of John D. Weld, a well-known Boston business man, who died suddenly during a fire at Hotel Lenox, are investigating the cause of his death.

The question arises as to the origin of the fire in his room, which was discovered a few minutes before Mr. Weld was found unconscious in the corridor. The blaze did trifling damage and the rest of the other guests was disturbed.

One theory is that Mr. Weld smoked in bed and fell asleep. Others in the hotel think an overturned chafing dish started the fire. Mr. Weld had slight burns on his hands and forehead. He was sixty years old and unmarried. His valet lived with him.

Mrs. Richardson of No. 9 Bay State road was a sister of Mr. Weld.

COL. TUCKER'S FATE WITH ARMY BOARD

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—The probable fate of Colonel William F. Tucker, U. S. A., will rest with the army retiring board, which will meet in this city at an early date. Colonel Tucker is being attacked by his wife, Mrs. Dollie Logan Tucker, who alleges infidelity.

PASTOR TELLS WHAT BOSTON MOST NEEDS

The Rev. George W. King answered the question of "What is the Matter With Boston?" last night at the People's Temple. Among other things which have made people ask it, he said, are misplaced charity, licentiousness, self-satisfaction, shallowness of conviction, a destructive criticism, lack of religious faith.

"Some day, when the millenium shall have been ushered in," he said, "Boston will be a city after its model—clean, pure, strong. I cannot truthfully say that she is such to-night."

Other points in his sermon follow:

"In the first place, there is entirely too much misplaced charity in Boston. There are too many people who make a business of begging.

"For those who are really worthy and need help I believe that there are plenty of good, kind, charitable people who will supply all they require. The unworthy ought not to be helped.

"Isn't it a lamentable condition of affairs when, in a city having such a high moral and intellectual standard, it is difficult for decent women to walk the streets at night without being insulted by villainous men? When, likewise, good men cannot walk the streets without being accosted by bad women? Yet this is true in Boston.

"The thing Boston needs to-day more than anything else is a full faith in Jesus Christ."

WOULD BRIDLE WIFE'S TONGUE

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Bernard J. Flynn, through his attorney, Robert E. Cantwell, has filed a bill of injunction to restrain his wife, Nora K. Flynn, from talking. The ability to close a woman's mouth and make her keep a secret has not been accomplished heretofore.

Mr. Flynn wants his wife restrained from talking, writing, communicating in any way or by any means with him. He also wants her enjoined from even calling to look at him wherever he may be working or living. Flynn says he could earn big money if his wife would let him alone.

FIRE RUINS $15,000 PITTSFIELD HOME

PITTSFIELD, Jan. 18.—Fire destroyed the residence of Dr. William R. A. Wilson at Bartlett avenue and Broad street, early to-day. The loss will exceed $15,000, covered by insurance. The fire was discovered by a servant. It started in the basement from the furnace. Dr. Wilson is a retired New York physician.

"THE BARRIER", By Rex Beach

A ROMANCE OF THE KLONDIKE. THE STORY OF A KENTUCKY SOLDIER'S LOVE

Synopsis

JOHN GALE, post trader at Flambeau, on the Yukon, has an Indian wife, Alluna, and one beautiful daughter, Necia. The girl has just returned home from a mission school. Her father tells her that the discovery of gold is bringing thousands of fortune-seekers to the region, and that the Government, to avert disorder, has established a small army post at Flambeau. The handful of soldiers are commanded by young Lieutenant Burrell. As Necia and her father are discussing the affairs of the latter's French partner, Poleon Doret, who is expected back soon from a trip to Dawson, Burrell saunters up and enters into conversation with the girl. Burrell, who is attracted by Necia, learns with horror that she is a half-breed Indian.

CHAPTER II.

Poleon Doret's Hand Is Quicker Than His Tongue.

(Copyright, 1909, by Harper & Bros.)

THE trader's house sat back of the post, farther up on the hill. It was a large, sleepy house, sprawling up against the sunny side of the slope, as if it had sought the southern exposure for warmth, and had dozed off one sultry afternoon and never waked up from its slumber. It was of great, square-hewn timbers, built in the Russian style, the under side of each log hollowed to fit snug up over its fellow underneath, upon which dried moss had previously been spread, till in effect the foot-thick walls were tongued and grooved, and, through years of seasoning, become so tinder dry that no frosts or heats could penetrate them.

Many architects had worked on it as it grew, room by room, through the years, and every man had left behind the mark of his individuality, from Pretty Charley, the pilot, who swung an axe better than any Indian on the river, to Larsen, the ship's carpenter, who worked with an adze and who starved the summer following on the Koyukuk. It had stretched a bit year by year, for the trader's family had been big in the early days when hunters and miners of both breeds came in to trade, to loaf and to swap stories with him.

Through the Winter days, when the caribou were in the north and the moose were scarce, whole families of natives came and camped there, for Alluna, his squaw, drew to her own blood, and they felt it their due to eat of the bounty of him who ruled them like an overlord; but when the first goose honked they slipped away, until, by the time the salmon showed, the house was empty again and silent, save for Alluna and the youngsters.

In return these people brought him many skins and much fresh meat, for which he paid no price, and, with the Fall, his cache was filled with fish, of which the bulk were dried king salmon as long as a grown man's leg and worth a dollar apiece to any traveler.

There are men whose wits are quick as light, and whose muscles have been so tempered and hardened by years of exercise that they are like those of a wild animal. Of such was John Gale; but with all his intelligence he was very slow at reading; hence he chose to spend his evenings with his pipe and his thoughts, rather than with a book, as lonesome men are supposed to do.

He did with little sleep, and many nights he sat alone until Alluna and Necia would be awakened by his heavy step as he went to his bed. That he was a man who could really think, and that his thoughts were engrossing, no one doubted who saw him sitting enthralled at such a time, for he neither rocked, nor talked, nor moved a muscle hour after hour, and only his eyes were alive. To-night the spell was on him again, and he sat bulked up in his chair, rocklike and immovable.

From the open door of the next room he could hear Necia and the little ones. She had made them ready for bed and was telling them the tale of the snowbird's spot.

"So when all the other birds had failed," he heard her say, "the little snowbird asked for a chance to try. He flew and flew, and just before he came to the edge of the world where the two Old Women lived he pulled out all of his feathers. When he came to them he said:

"'I am very cold. May I warm myself at your fire?'

"They saw how little and naked he was, and how he shivered, so they did not throw sticks at him, but allowed him to creep close. He watched his chance, and when they were not looking he picked up a red-hot coal in his beak and flew back home with it as fast as ever he could—and that is how fire came to the Indian people.

"Of course the coal was hot, and it burned his throat till a drop of blood came through, so ever since that day the snowbird has had a red spot on his throat."

The two children spoke out in their mother's tongue, clamoring for the story of the Good Beaver, who saved the hunter's life, and she began, this time in the language of the Yukon people, while Gale listened to the low music of her voice, muffled and broken by the log partition.

His squaw came in, her arrival unannounced except by the scuff of her moccasins, and seated herself against the wall. She did not use a chair, of which there were several, but crouched upon a bearskin, her knees beneath her chin, her toes a trifle drawn together. She sat thus for a long time, while Necia continued her stories and put the little ones to bed. Soon the girl came to say good-night.

John Gale had never kissed his daughter, and, as it was not a custom of her mother's race, she never missed the caresses. On rare occasions the old man romped with the little ones and took them in his arms and acted as other fathers act, but he had never done these things with her. When she had gone he spoke without moving.

"She'll never marry Poleon Doret."

"Why?" inquired Alluna.

"He ain't her kind."

"Poleon is a good man."

"None better. But she'll marry some—some white man."

"Poleon is white," the squaw declared.

"He is and he ain't. I mean she'll marry an 'outside' man. He ain't good enough, and—well, he ain't her kind." Alluna's grunt of indignation was a sufficient answer to this, but he resumed, jerking his head in the direction of the barracks. "She's been talking a lot with this—this soldier."

"Him good man, too, I guess," said the wife.

"The hell he is!" cried the trader, fiercely. "He don't mean any good to her."

"Him got a woman, eh?" said the other.

to bowl. Before its voice had died away another took it up sadly, and within three breaths, from up and down the half-mile of scanty water-front, came the cry of "Steam-bo-o-a-t!"

Cabin doors opened and men came out, glanced up the stream and echoed the call, while from sleepy nooks and sun-warmed roofs wolf-dogs arose, yawning and stretching. Those who had slept late dressed as they hurried towards the landing-place, joining in the plaint, till men and malamutes united in the shrill, slow cry.

Down-stream came the faint-sighing whoof-whoof of a steamer, and then out from behind the bend she burst, running on the swift Spring current with the speed of a deer. She blew hoarsely before the tardy ones had reached the bank, and when abreast of the town her bell clanged, the patter of her great wheel ceased, she reversed her engines and swung gracefully till her bow was up against the current, then ploughed back, inching it slowly until, with much shouting and the sound of many gongs, she slid her nose quietly into the bank beneath the trading-post and was made fast.

Her cabin-deck was lined with passengers, most of whom were bound for the "outside," although still clad in mackinaw and overalls. They all gazed silently at the hundred men of Flambeau, who stared back at them till the gang-plank was placed, when they came ashore to stretch their legs.

One of them, however, made sufficient noise to make up for the silence of the others. Before the steamer had grounded he appeared among the Siwash deck-hands, his head and shoulders towering above them, his white teeth gleaming from a face as dark as theirs, shouting to his friends ashore and pantomiming his delight to the two Gale children who had come with Alluna to welcome him.

"Who's dose beeg, tall people w'at stan' 'longside of you, Miz Gale?" he called to her. Then, shading his eyes elaborately, he cried in a great voice: "Wal! wal! I b'lieve dat's M'sieu Jean an' Mam'selle Mollee. Ba gar! Dey get so beeg w'ile I'm gone I don' know dem no more!"

The youthful Gales wriggled at this delicious flattery and dug their toes into the sand. Mollie courtesied nervously and continuously as she clung to her mother, and the boy showed a gap where two front teeth had been and was now filled by a very pink tongue.

"W'en you goin' stop grow, anyhow, you two, eh?" continued the Frenchman, and then, in a tone of sadness: "If I t'ink you ack lak' dis, I don' buy all dese present. Dese t'ing ain' no good for ole folks. I guess I'll t'row dem away." He made as if to heave a bundle that he carried into the river, whereupon the children shrieked at him so shrilly that he laughed long and incontinently at the success of his sally.

Lieutenant Burrell had come with the others, for the arrival of a steamboat called for the presence of every soul in camp, and, spying Necia in the outskirts of the crowd, he took his place beside her. He felt constrained, after what had happened on the previous evening, but she seemed to have forgotten the episode, and greeted him with her usual frankness.

Even had she remembered it, there was nothing she could say in explanation or apology. He had lain awake for hours thinking of her, and had fallen asleep with her still in his mind, for the revelation of her blood had come as a shock to him, the full force of which he could not appreciate until he had given himself time to think of it calmly.

He had sprung from a race of slave-holders, from a land where birth and breed are more than any other thing, where a drop of impure blood effects an ineradicable stain; therefore the thought of this girl's ignoble parentage was so repugnant to him that the more he pondered

"No, no! I reckon he's single all right, but you don't understand. He's different from us people. He's—he's—" Gale paused, at a loss for words to convey his meaning. "Well, he ain't the kind that would marry a half-breed."

Alluna pondered this cryptic remark unsuccessfully, and was still seeking its solution when her lord continued:

"If she really got to loving him it would be bad for all of us."

Evidently Alluna read some hidden meaning back of these words, for she spoke quickly, but in her own tongue now, as she was accustomed to do when excited or alarmed.

"Then this thing must cease at once. The risk is too great. Better that you kill him before it is too late."

"Hardly that," said the trader.

"Think of the little ones and of me," the squaw insisted, and, encouraged by his silence, continued: "Why not? Soon the nights will grow dark. The river runs swiftly, and it never gives up its dead. I can do it if you dare not. No one would suspect me."

Gale rose and laid his big hand firmly on her shoulder.

"Don't talk like that. There has been too much blood let already. We'll allow things to run along a bit as they are. There's time enough to worry."

He rose, but instead of going to his room he strode out of the house and walked northward up the trail, passing through the town and out of sight. Alluna sat huddled up in the doorway, her shawl drawn close about her head, and waited for him until the late sun—which at this time of year revolves in a great circle overhead—dipped down below the distant mountains for the midnight hour, then rolled slanting out again a few points farther north, to begin its long journey anew; but he did not return. At last she crept stiffly indoors, like an old and weary woman, the look of fright still staring in her eyes.

About 9 o'clock the next morning a faint and long-drawn cry came from the farthest limits of the little camp. An instant later it was echoed closer, and then a dog began it the more pitiful it seemed, the more monstrous.

Lying awake and thinking of her in the stillness of his quarters, it had seemed a very unfortunate and a very terrible thing. During his morning duties the vision of her had been fresh before him again, and his constant contemplation of the matter had wrought a change in his attitude towards the girl, of which he was uncomfortably conscious and which he was glad to see she did not perceive.

"There are some of the lucky men from El Dorado Creek," she informed him, pointing out certain people on the deck. "They are going out to the States to get something to eat. They say that nothing like those mines have ever been heard of in the world. I wish father had gone up last year when the news came."

"Why didn't he?" asked the Lieutenant.

"Surely, he must have been among the first to learn of it."

"Yes, 'Stick' George sent him word a year ago last fall, when he made the first discovery, but for some reason father wouldn't go."

The men were pouring off the boat now, and through the crowd came the tall Frenchman, nearing in the hollow of each arm a child who clasped a bundle to its breast. His eyes grew brighter at sight of Necia, and he broke into a flood of patois; they fairly bombarded each other with quick questions and fragmentary answers till she remembered her companion, who had fallen back a pace and was studying the newcomer, whereupon she turned.

"Oh, I forgot my manners. Lieutenant Burrell, this is Napoleon Doret—or Poleon!" she added, with proud emphasis.

Doret checked his volubility and stared at the soldier, whom he appeared to see for the first time. The little brown people in his arms stared likewise, and it seemed to Burrell that a certain distrust was in each of the three pairs of eyes, only in those of the man there was no shyness. Instead, the Canadian looked him over gravely from head to heel, seeming to note each point of the unfamiliar attire; then he inquired, without removing his glance:

"W'ere'bouts you live, eh?"

"I live at the post yonder," said the Lieutenant.

"W'at biznesse you work at?"

"I am a soldier."

"W'at for you come 'ere? Dere's nobody fightin' roun' dis place."

"The Lieutenant has been stationed here, foolish," said Necia. "Come up to the store quick and tell me what it's like at Dawson." With a farewell nod to Burrell, she went off with Doret, whose speech was immediately released again.

In spite of the man's unfriendliness, Burrell watched him with admiration. There were no heels to his tufted fur boots, and yet he stood a good six feet two, as straight as a pine sapling, and it needed no second glance to tell of what metal he was made. His spirit showed in his whole body, in the set of his head, and, above all, in his dark, warm face, which glowed with eagerness when he talked, and that was ever—when he was not singing.

"I never see so many people since I 'ef' Quebec," he was saying. "She's jus' lak beeg city—mus' be t'ree, four t'ousan' people. Every day some more dey come, an' all night dey dance an' sing an' drink w'iskee. Ba gosh, dat's fine place!"

"Are there lots of white women?" asked the girl.

"Yes, two, t'ree hondred. Mos' of dem is work in dance-halls. Dere's one fine gal I see, name' Marie Bourgette. I tell you 'bout her by-an'-by."

"Oh, Poleon, you're in love!" cried Necia.

"No, siree!" he denied. "Dere's none of dem gal look half so purty lak' you." He would have said more, but spying the trader at the entrance of the store, he went to him, straightway launching into the details of their commercial enterprise, which, happily, had been most successful.

Before they could finish, the crowd from the boat began to drift in, some of them buying drinks at the bar and others making purchases of tobacco and so forth, but for the main part merely idling about curiously.

A Girl of 100 Selves

AND so I am saying good-by to you, girls, and women, and men, and all my readers. For I have told you all that my Hundred Selves will let me say just now, and it is they who control me absolutely.

Now, that I have poured my heart out to you they are pacified for a little while, and will give me some peace.

It all seems so strange to me, when I pause to realize how I have stripped my very soul to you in these confessions; how the seething, turbulent selves of me have urged and driven me until I have been forced to reveal my true self, as I am.

And because I have been myself; because I have revealed to you secrets which even my dearest friends have never guessed; huge, luscious secrets, and burning ones, that it frightens me to think I have disclosed—because I have done this, I say, I must not and cannot make known to you my name.

I feel it to-night, poignantly, as one feels shame, or anguish, or sudden panic. All these emotions are mine, indeed, when I face my accusing eyes in the mirror—wide eyes that cry to me, "You have told! You have told! How could you, oh, how could you?"

In Terror, but Not a Coward

And a blue flame of consternation bathes me from head to foot. Did you ever feel such a fright as this, I wonder? Fright that burns to the very marrow and beyond? Then you know the terror that is mine at the mere thought of letting my identity be known.

Oh, call me a coward! Fling at me that I am afraid to acknowledge the children of my own brain; that I have disowned them at the last. Say it, if you like. I know it is not true; and my Hundred Selves know it, and understand.

They know, and I know, that I would disown nothing; that I would retract nothing; that I have written sincerely of my innermost thoughts and feelings; and am glad that I have written. But I am glad of it simply for this—that you do not know my true identity, and cannot.

It was only because you did not know that I was free to write my heart out to you, as I have done; and now it is only the thought that you will never know me that relieves the panic of knowing I have told.

Was Forced to Write

How could I tell? Why did I tell? How did I come to write the Confessions of The Girl With a Hundred Selves? First because I had to do it. I was impelled. I was driven.

You know, I told you how the persistent, pushing selves of me kept clamoring for expression until I was forced to give them utterance? And it is absolutely true.

For a long time I had felt this pressure without understanding; completely at a loss how to interpret the rage of distress within me. One thing I was certain of—no single human being in the world understood me. No one even glimpsed the power and passion of me; no one suspected I was anything but a sweetly innocuous, pretty girl, walking complacently the humdrum, narrow paths of life.

And that was maddening! No words of mine can describe to you how maddening it was.

I panted, I raged, I choked over it, in the silence of my own room, when my Hundred Selves and I could be alone.

And then, one day, the yearning came to me to write it; to write it, every bit—all the fury and the resentment and the biting pain; all the humiliation and the grief; all the love and the vehement longing.

It was the safety valve. It meant the rescue of my selves and me from torment. It meant the passionate release of emotions that threatened to consume me by their fury. It meant expression.

I know that there are hundreds of thousands that struggle and suffer as I do, because the stupid ones about them fail utterly to understand them.

I know it is an old story, this bitter plaint, "I am not understood!" I know the stupid people turn a contemptuous lip at it and laugh.

It is doubtful if any human being is ever wholly understood in this life. Certain it is that most of us are ruthlessly misinterpreted and misjudged.

No One Is Ever Understood

There is so much more of every living person than that person can possibly express. We are all so much larger, so much greater than our friends suspect. They can't see Us—the inner selves of us. They see the outside only, and they cannot judge. And we misjudge them, too, when we lack the inner sight.

Oh flame-hearted girls like me—you who feel the urging and the warring of your Hundred Selves and crave to tell it, yet can only pant and chafe and rage at the restrictions that bind and throttle you—I know your sufferings, every one!

And if it has made you happier to feel that some other girl understands; if, reading my confessions, you have said, "I, too, have felt as she has. I know; I know!" If you have said this, then I am recompensed abundantly, and all my Hundred Selves rejoice.

I don't believe I can ever tell you what joy this writing has been to me. Isn't it strange how just writing your heart out can make you rapturous and refreshed. It's like tears, I think—vehement tears, that leave the soul clean and shining and newly born.

That is how I feel to-night as I say farewell to you. And I am sorry I cannot tell you of my self—my actual self that has a name and an address.

I can only tell you this—that I am a real, live, flesh and blood girl, not a myth; that I live in this very city; that I am a wage earner, like many of you; and that, because the Real Woman Self is stronger in me than any other, I must always be known to you just as "The Girl With a Hundred Selves."

To-morrow's Best Bargains

IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

THE SHEPARD NORWELL CO. will offer two particularly good values on the fourth floor Tuesday. Several full-sized bed puffs in a large variety of colorings in Persian effects with silkoline tops and pure white filling, regularly sold for $1.25 and $1.50, may be had for $1 each. Also a most unusual bargain in pillow slips made (42x36) the right way of the cotton and finished with three-inch hem, at 9 cents each.

R. H. WHITE & CO. have an odd lot of silver plated knives, in dinner and tea size, made by Rogers Brothers and other well-known manufacturers, valued at $3 and $4 dozen, that will all be placed on sale Tuesday for 17 cents each. Here is an opportunity to purchase a good supply at low cost.

JORDAN MARSH CO. have a small lot of children's felt hats in the infants' department that will surely please the early shopper Tuesday. Just twenty hats in navy and brown felt, with ribbon band, that were formerly sold for $2 up to $3.95, have all been marked to 50 cents each.

Do Men Regard the Domestic Woman as "A Woman to Avoid"?

MERE man, almost from time immemorial, and especially in modern times, has bewailed the lack of domesticity in women. Every time the question is asked, "Why don't men marry?" two-thirds of the men answering it say, in effect, that it is because women are too much given to fashions and frippery, and too little inclined to be home-makers or to lead a domestic life.

Now comes Cosmo Hamilton, a prominent English playwright and essayist, who brands the domestic woman as "A Woman to Avoid." That is the exact heading that appears in a London weekly paper over the following:

By COSMO HAMILTON.

THE domestic woman is one of the most curious, unnatural, restless, necessary creatures ever brought about by civilization.

First of all, it must be remembered that a woman is domestic solely because she is not beautiful. Very early in her life she becomes aware of the fact that she is nothing to look at. She takes on domesticity at once as a sort of revenge. Whether she owns to it or is aware of it or not, her great desire is to get one back at men for the fact that she is not attractive to them.

She acquires the habit of domesticity almost from babyhood. What she does not know of domesticity isn't knowledge. She takes to domesticity as the duck who is not on the musical comedy stage takes to water. She makes an orgy of it.

She becomes an adept in the art of making home miserable. With Machiavellian ingenuity she goes out of her way to invent means whereby she may render her mankind tired of life.

I have only to mention the almost forbidden words, "Spring cleaning," to make every honest man cringe and gibber. Unlike most women, who are more than satisfied if their house is made clean once a year, the domestic woman drags the cleaning commenced in the Spring into Summer and Autumn and out again through the Winter into the following Spring.

Not for her the blessed period of peace and accumulating dust. Not for her the Nelson eye, the benign tact, the angelic unwatchfulness. Day by day, hour by hour, she is eagle-like in her habit of swooping.

It is wet. She watches you coming in to see not only that you ruin your soles on the scraper, and scratch them against the bristling cleaner, but stands over you while you rub them on the mat. She follows you into the hall to see that you do not hang up your dripping mackintosh on the peg, but give it to a servant to hang in a cellar.

It is hot and fine. You come in from tennis wearing shoes with indiarubber soles. There is a cheerful yell from her if you attempt to enter the house in them. They have a way of leaving dull imprints on the parquet. She stands over you, giving full, precise and wordy explanations, while you take them off.

Her house is less comfortable than a railway waiting room, and just as formal and hideous. You may not sit on certain chairs until your head has been paraded, and if, as is certain, you, being a civilized man, have some sort of tonic lotion upon it, you may not sit upon any chair except those that have wooden backs.

Your soul is not your own in the house of the domestic woman. In every room you are dogged, and your tobacco ash is metaphorically flung into your face, your carelessly-folded newspaper dangled in front of your nose, your bedroom slippers, left in the breakfast room, handed to you with sarcasm and a treatise on tidiness.

Even in the bathroom there is no peace. A wet sponge, soap left in the bath, a wet footprint upon the floor, splashes on the polished taps, a spot of tooth powder upon the basin, a towel unhung, and you are put into the dock on the first opportunity.

The domestic woman reduces all the hideous small points of upper middle class and middle class etiquette to the level of an art. She has her second Tuesdays and fourth Thursdays.

She goes forth regularly with sheaves of pasteboard, a pack of which she scatters upon the hall tables of here enemies. She drags her cowardly husband to appalling tea fights and whist drives, and always in those natural sudden silences is heard telling all and sundry of her husband's careless ways.

But this is not yet the whole list of the reasons why the domestic woman is one of the women to avoid like sin. There is still another. She demands, though she does not always get, complete details of her husband's spendings, for she is the banker.

It behooves you to avoid the domestic woman.

Later on, Dorothy Dix will have something to say about Mr. Hamilton's article. In the meantime, readers of this paper are invited to write their opinions, telling whether they believe Mr. Hamilton rightly presents "mere man's" view of the subject, and to send them to the Magazine Page Editor of this paper.

Drawing as a Part of Education.

By Elbert Hubbard

WE call the man who cannot read and write "illiterate." He is pointed out and laughed at as one disgraced. "He cannot even read and write!"

The time will shortly come when a person who cannot sketch with pencil, pen or crayon will be regarded as one of very faulty education.

Think of a man versed in botany and not able to draw a picture of an oak leaf that you can distinguish from an elm! And what say you if a zoologist who cannot make a picture of a horse that will not also pass for a mule? Then what shall we say of a person who can speak English, French and German, and who has passed high in Greek and Latin, who cannot express himself in the very first language the last and universal language of the picture?

Hieroglyphics is the first form of writing, but now in our arrogance we think we can skip this stage of our evolution. Nature has given us the hint, but we refuse, so dear is this first step in civilization. Can we leave it out and go unpunished? Dr. G. Stanley Hall says not.

Not Hard to Learn.

To learn to draw is not so difficult as to learn a new language. Anybody who will apply himself an hour a day for a few weeks can acquire skill sufficient to draw faces.

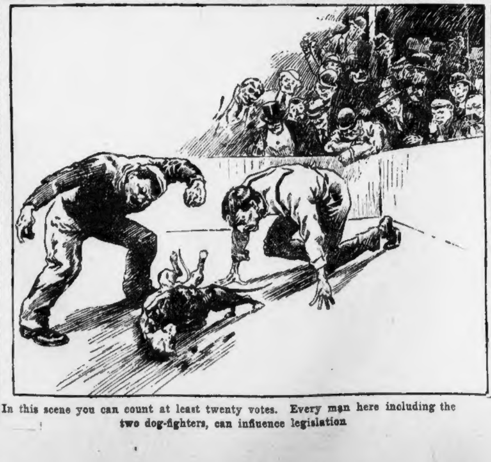
To be a portrait painter is, of course, another thing—this is not for the many. Only one man out of ten thousand who knows grammar can write a strong and vivid story, but if he could not write letters to his friends we would regard him as a defective.

Thackeray could write stories and illustrate them, and he usually illustrated them before he wrote them. Writing to Dickens, Thackeray once said: "The delight of my life is to draw pictures, and I never see a funny face—or a beautiful one—without feeling for my pencil and pad."

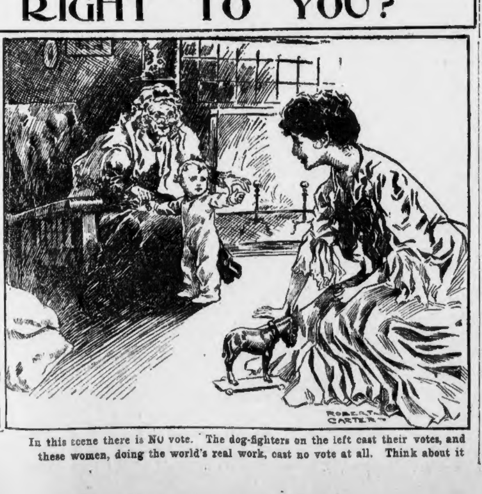
The fact that as a people we cannot draw makes us poor critics of art—unappreciative. You must have tried a thing yourself before you know the difficulty of doing it in a masterly way.

To be akin to the artist you must have tried to be an artist yourself. And this great truth is what William Morris had in mind when he made his plea for the education of head, hand and heart.

DOES THIS SEEM RIGHT TO YOU?



In this scene you can count at least twenty votes. Every man here including the two dog-fighters, can influence legislation



In this scene there is NO vote. The dog-fighters on the left cast their votes, and these women, doing the world's real work, cast no vote at all. Think about it

Earning Her Living

By Beatrice Fairfax

DOES a married woman earn her own living? "Well, rather!" as our English cousins would say. She not only earns her own, but she half earns that of her husband as well.

There are wives who are more of a drawback than a helpmate to their husbands, but the average wife more than does her share, as wife, mother and housekeeper. The husband actually earns the money, but the wife saves it or spends it wisely, and thus helps double the profits.

Not only does the married woman earn her own living, but she is free from selfish motives in so doing. For husband, children, home, she will slave until mind and body are worn out, and not one cent does she get for her work.

Husband's Equal Partner.

Of course, she is clothed, and has a roof to cover her head. If she marries a successful and generous man she has luxuries. Also, she has her children. But the home, the luxuries and the children belong just as much to the man as to her. So, all things considered, the liabilities of the matrimonial firm are equal.

The woman who is wife and mother carries the greatest responsibilities of any one in the world; and, when she does her duty, who shall dare say that she does not earn her own living?

She gets no salary, and yet her work is from sun to sun, a labor of love, splendid and all-enduring.

Other women who earn their own livings on stated salaries can throw up their positions if the whim seizes them. Not so the married woman. Love and duty chain her fast to the wheel, no matter how wearisome the work.

When a man hands his wife $25, with the request that she make it go as far as possible, and by careful managing she makes it go twice as far as he would, is she not earning her own living.

In return for a home, she gives life, service, and good, hard service at that.

Many women marry; many do not. But the heart of every unmarried woman is at the feet of her married sister; for she knows the self-sacrifice woman is capable of, and that the mother of a family sacrifices self daily, hourly.

Most Wonderful Human Beings.

There are so many splendid wives and mothers in the world that people do not half appreciate them. They are the most numerous and the most wonderful of human beings.

Every married man in the country ought to rise up and proclaim the fact that his wife does earn her own living, and that she earns it gloriously.

With generous, o'erflowing hands and heart, she gives time, love, service, patience, interest; and she sets no time limit on her service.

And, yet, there are people ready to declare that the married woman does not earn her own living.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

SOME FANCIED OFFENCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for nearly a year and during that time she has met all my advances favorably. Now, without any explanation, she has flatly refused to see me. I love this girl very much and I look to you, who have led others out of the wilderness, to help me in this trouble.

D. L.

IN all probability she has taken offence at some fancied slight. Write and ask her if she will not at least see you in order to talk things over.

A HARD LESSON

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I wonder if you can help me out in my trouble. I am a girl twenty-one years of age and have been friendly with a young fellow for the past three years. Last Summer he proposed to me and I accepted him, and now for no reason at all he keeps away from me. I suspect that he is going with another girl. Will you please advise me as to how to forget this fellow? I love him so much that I am constantly thinking about him, and the worry of it all is positively making me melancholy. I struggle against this feeling, but even in my working hours I cannot forget him.

A HEART-BROKEN GIRL.

POOR little girl! I wish with all my heart, that I could help you to forget, but that is a lesson that every woman must learn alone. The best and quickest way to forget is through hard work. Think about other people, and work hard, and some day you will awake to the fact that his image is fading. And then, dear, you will realize that your love was given to a man who was not worthy of it.

A POOR PLAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Having gone with a young fellow for three years and seeing him three nights in a week, and often more, would like to know if it would be improper to suggest that we come to some understanding; as he is now going with other girls and I have the opportunity to go with other young men, but do not, as I don't care to have three birds in a bush and none in the hand.

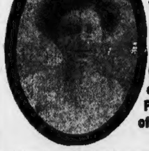
I like this young man and know he likes me in return, but think it is best not to be quick in making a change. As I'm getting more on in years I find it best to have one whom you can depend on. We are both in our twenties.

C. C.

I CANNOT say that I think much of your suggestion. In the first place, you are young and in no immediate need of settling down. After three years' courtship the man should have some definite idea as to whether or no he loves you, and it might be a good thing for you to withdraw slightly from the friendly terms on which you now stand. When he sees that you have other chances he may realise how much he cares for you and bring matters to a crisis.

DON'T BE SO THIN!

Let Me Prove That I Can Help You Without a Penny of Cost



Would a little more flesh make you more stylish and attractive?

Would 10 or 20 pounds more make you better satisfied with your personal appearance?

Would your gowns look better and please you and others more if you were a little stouter?

If so, do you believe anyone can give you the additional flesh you desire?

I PROVE IT FREE

If you write me to-day I will send you promptly sufficient Dr. Whitney's Nerve and Flesh Builder to prove that it will give you a superb figure with beautiful arms, shapely neck and shoulders, full round bust, and well developed limbs; not for the time being, but permanently.

There will not be a penny of charge for this; my experience proves that I can well afford to take all the risk in proving what this Treatment will do.

This is a purely vegetable compound and cannot possibly do you any harm, but is always of great benefit to the general health.

It will positively enlarge the bust from 2 to 6 inches and give a healthy tint to the complexion; the Free Trial Treatment proves this.

Don't delay, write to-day to the C. L. Jones Co., 2S1A Friend Bldg., Elmira, N. Y., because if this generous offer overcrowds us it will have to be withdrawn.

BIG GAINS FOR PAST WEEK IN REALTY RECORD

Records of mortgages placed during the past week, as compiled by the Real Estate Exchange, show a large increase over those of the corresponding weeks of both 1908 and 1907. A total of 421 mortgages having an aggregate of value of $1,037,806 was placed for the week ending Saturday.

One of the largest of these, which is also the largest that has been placed for many months, was $250,000. It was taken by the Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Company, and was a parcel on Commonwealth avenue, near the Hotel Somerset, containing 20,000 square feet of land and buildings. It runs for a term of three years at 4 per cent. per year.

The following table shows the record for the week ending January 16 and the corresponding weeks of 1908 and 1907:

STEAK DINNER COST $70,000

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—In the Icicle-lined-for-the-occasion rathskeller of the Hotel Metropole last night 100 guests of George A. Kessler sat down to a $10,000 beefsteak dinner. The whole place had been transformed into what looked like a wholesale butcher's refrigerating plant, with imitation ammonia pipes, a frosted ceiling, paper-mache steaks, painted tin cutlets—and all so natural that "Big Tim" Sullivan's teeth chattered as he shook hands with De Wolf Hopper and "Diamond Jim" Brady.

The favors were $50 silver mugs. The guests, who sat on wooden benches, ate on tables which were imitation cakes of ice. The diners wore aprons. The drink was every bit grape juice.

Among the guests were Ethel Barrymore, ex-Governor "Bill" Bunn of Philadelphia and wife, Felix Isman, "Little Tim" Sullivan, Anna Held and husband, the Countess Loida and Miss Loida, Charley Ross, Ida Brooks Hunt, R. G. Knowles, Miss Billy Burke, William Collier, Major Dougherty, Captain Wheeler and Emma Janvier.

George's January Reductions

A BOSTON TREAT TO SNAPPY DRESSERS

EVERY part of a tailor made garment is thoroughly and scientifically constructed. There is often more labor in a tailor made garment than there is on a dozen ready made. This explains why our offers of merchant tailors' misfits and uncalled for garments at one-third the made-to-order prices are greater values than ready made reductions. Values talk and we name 2. Choice of dark blue Worsted Sack Suit, or black Kersey Overcoat, both elegantly tailored in the snappy Broadway, New York, style. Made by Watson of that famous thoroughfare for $40. Our price, in either 58 [illegible], $12. Former prices, $15. Nearly 4,000 other garments to select from, including auto coats, and fur and fur-lined coats for street wear, on which we can save you 50 per cent. GEORGE'S TAILOR PARLORS, 14 SUMMER ST. STREET TRAFFIC REGULATIONS: AMENDMENT—In Board of Street Commissioners, Boston, Mass., January 7, 1909. Ordered: That Article 5, of the rules for the regulation of street traffic, be amended by adding thereto the following section: "Section 13—Police officers may, in their discretion, extend for a specified number of minutes only, the time limits fixed in Section 4 of Article 6, in section 2 and Section 11, of Article 5, and in Section 2 of Article 9, whenever in their judgment such extension does not interfere with the free passage of vehicles or pedestrians." Ordered—That Section 1, of Article 5, of the rules for the regulation of street traffic, be amended by adding to said section the words, "nor to vehicles standing under license or permit on established hackney carriage stands," so that said section shall read: "Section 1—No vehicle shall stop with its left side to the curb. This rule shall not apply to the one-way streets referred to in Article 8 of these rules, nor to vehicles standing under license or permit on established hackney carriage stands." Ordered—That Section 1, of Article 3, of the rules for the regulation of street traffic, be amended in the second line of the first paragraph by inserting before the word "vehicles" the words, "Sundays and legal holidays excepted," so that said paragraph shall read: "Section 1—Between the hours of 7 o'clock a. m. and 6 o'clock p. m., Sundays and legal holidays excepted, vehicles shall pass in but one direction in the following named streets:" SALEM D. Stop the War of Vulgar Insults

And Let Us See to It That It Is Never Repeated in Washington

The representative people of this country, which means the great body of the American people, are sincerely anxious for a speedy termination to the disgraceful wrangle in public life in Washington.

The nature and the conditions of the controversies in and out of Congress during the last week make a national and an international scandal which is distasteful to the citizens whose interests make up the government of this great country.

There is no excuse for it in fact or in precedent or in manners.

Without pausing to fix the original responsibility upon any one, we content ourselves with saying that the bandying of terms of insult between the White House and the upper chamber and the lower chamber of our National Assembly is offensive to the dignity and decency of the American people.

Senators of high standing and of long experience hurl the epithets of liar and trickster at the Chief Executive and Cabinet officers of this great republic, while Representatives upon the floor of the lower house, in language equally undignified, violate the proprieties and insult the dignity of the government of the people.

No matter who began it, it is unworthy of the times and the country in which we live. If Senators or Congressmen have been guilty of improper acts or improper conduct, it is possible to tell them so without using terms of personal insult and personal denunciation.

And if Senators and Representatives are so arraigned before the bar of public opinion and the law, they do not strengthen their own defense or win the favor of the people by responses couched in vulgar insult or in terms of billingsgate and denunciation.

The language of the slums was not meant to be employed in the halls of Congress or in the communications between those who have been honored with a representative character in this republic.

The Congressmen of the United States are gathered to consider great and important questions vital to the welfare and dignity of the American people.

THEY ARE WASTING PUBLIC TIME AND PUBLIC MONEY IN THE INTERCHANGE OF BITTER AND VULGAR PERSONALITIES WHICH ARE PROFITABLE NEITHER TO THEMSELVES NOR TO THE PEOPLE WHO ELECT THEM TO OFFICE AND PAY THEM FOR THEIR SERVICES IN THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

As a representative American newspaper, and as a unit at least in the aggregate of wholesome public sentiment in this republic, we protest against further interchange of these vulgar personalities in the official circles of our national government.

We call upon the stronger and more influential men in either house of Congress to suppress and to end this episode here and now, and to see that it never has a repetition in the annals of the government.

And we urgently invoke the entire attention and all the brains and all the energies of the American Congress in both chambers, and of the White House as well, in the consideration, upon large, sane and reasonable grounds, of the really vital and important questions which concern the people whom they represent and whose dignity and interest they carry upon their lips and in their votes.

We have had enough of beer garden language and manners in the government at Washington.

Let us return to the dignity of our fathers and to the full decency of our times.

The Unwritten Law Has Its Limits

Fear is felt that the acquittal of Thornton Hains, charged with aiding and abetting his brother, Captain Peter C. Hains, in the murder of William E. Annis, will encourage an outbreak of similar crimes.

This fear is based on the logical case in law made against the defendant Hains versus the evidence permitted to go before the jury unrebutted that Annis had been guilty of shamefully shameless relations with the wife of Captain Hains.

The court ruled that this evidence was admissible to show the cause of Captain Hains's alleged insane suddenness of impulse to kill Annis, and, in turn, as bearing on the contention that Thornton Hains was an innocent spectator.

Thus one side of the story of Captain Hains's terrible wrong was revealed in its nastiest horror to the jury—without rebuttal—and a legal side issue became the moral main issue of the trial.

The result is a victory of the unwritten law over the written law.

But it should be realized sharply that if the stories told in court about the lurid liaison of Annis and Claudia Hains were at all reasonably true, Captain Hains did not kill a man whom he merely suspected or of whom he was merely jealous. HE HAD DIRECT PROOF.

Much of the crime seeking refuge in the unwritten law violates the "code of honor" as much as it defies the enacted law of the land and the divine commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

This Hains verdict does not promise immunity to the man who knows and tolerates his wife's infidelity and finally tries to wash out the stain of his own cowardice with blood.

The jealous and suspicious man who would kill first and learn the truth afterward; the stupid man whom a woman turned to hate can use to slay one who scorns her; the man who is easy prey for that peculiar perversion of some women in wanting notoriety as the beautiful witch for whom men battle to the death—these are doubly fools if they think the acquittal of Thornto Hains is license to become heroes of sensational murder trials.

Instead of Thornton Hains being on trial, it was Captain Hains, who, unlike Thornton, did not know of the liaison until it came as a blow, and who, whatever Thornton's guilt was, stood within the unwritten law when he fired.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

TO PREVENT DROWNING IN THE CHARLES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

You are doubtless aware that several children have lost their lives skating on the Charles river during the past few days. Might I suggest as a means of avoiding these lamentable accidents that one or two tall posts or flagstaffs be erected, and in the daytime a red flag be kept flying when the ice is considered unsafe, and a white flag to be hoisted when the ice is safe. At night these flags might be replaced by red and white lights. Either this or some other means ought to be adopted to prevent further loss of life and to help to allay the fears of anxious parents.

WELL WISHER.

THE HALL-ROOMS' FRIENDS

Editor Boston American:

I buy a bright "American"
Each day that ends,
And eagerly its pages scan
To find my friends.

I smile to see them tossed and torn
With life's alloys,
And when I find them not, I mourn
The Hall-room boys!

The Good Wife and the Too Good Wife

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

EVERY now and then a world-weary and folly-weary man marries an innocent, unworldly and "good woman." He wants the sweet home life he has not found in the paths of Pleasure, nor in the byways of License. He wants the unmercenary devotion of a loving woman, and he wants to walk forth in the broad light of day, unashamed, with his wife by his side.

It is the inevitable goal of every worth-while man.

The world approves of such marriages, and the woman feels that she is filling the highest mission of her sex in reclaiming a lost sheep.

But how few such women know the wise middle course to walk with such a man.

It is all very well to listen and believe when he tells you he is happier than he has ever been in his life before, and that his home is dearer to him than any club on earth.

The Weeping Wife

But it is far from very well if you fall upon his neck and weep the first time he intimates that he would like to drop in at the club and talk with the old chums for an hour.

This is the poorest method you could adopt to convince him of the greater joys of home.

There is a certain fascination in club life to most men. There is danger in this fascination to some men. When a man sickens of it and wants a home it is because he has had nothing but his club, and because there is a worthy element in his nature which calls for something better.

The fact that he should want to visit the old scene now and then is not an indication that he is sick of home or that he is wandering from the fold again.

If the pasture is sweet and the shepherdess kind and wise, the sheep will not wander far.

Don't Always Watch

Constant surveillance never yet kept a man true. It has made many a man unfaithful.

Although your husband may have told you over and over that you are tenfold more pleasing to him than any woman he ever knew before he met you, that does not signify that he might not like to sit by some other at a dinner party or dance with some other at a cotillion. It does not signify that he would not enjoy talking with others whom he regards less highly than you.

In the association with the women he does not love a man often most appreciates the woman he does love. Should he take a seat by some other woman and converse with her in your presence, do not act sulky, distrait or injured.

That only makes you ridiculous and unlovable.

It is easy for many women to be brilliant and it is easy for others to be good. But it seems the most difficult thing in the world for a woman to be sensible.

Genius and virtue are everywhere, but we must search for common sense.

Woman is called a composite creature, but man is tenfold more composite. When a man has had the whole world catering to everything in his makeup, except his love of virtue, he is not to be made abidingly happy with nothing but that quality satisfied.

He cannot suddenly and permanently change his whole mental structure.

Be satisfied, then, if your husband gives up the liberties and vices which the world allows a bachelor, but do not ask him to relinquish the courtesies and recreations which are every man's privilege.

Drive suspicion from your door and install confidence in its place. Cultivate self-esteem and self-confidence, and think, act, talk and live so sweetly and lovingly that rivalry is impossible.

Don't Imprison Him

Make the new life a holiday, not a term of imprisonment. A very good woman who has no human weakness in her nature is sometimes the devil's tool to drive man to drink.

Absolute loyalty, absolute morality, absolute honor and cleanliness of life every woman has the right to ask of her husband. The best of his devotion and the larger portion of his leisure should be given her voluntarily.

But to make him a willing captive should be woman's art, not to make him a life prisoner, and the home a reformatory, and the wife a suspicious warden, always imagining that the prisoner is planning escape.

The good wife must possess other qualities besides goodness to make her marriage with a mere man successful.

Common sense and tact must be two strands of the rope to make it strong enough to act as an anchor for the domestic ship. The too good wife relies wholly upon one strand and the ship breaks anchor.

If your husband has given up dissipation, do not insist that he must let his cigar go also.

If he has abandoned the gaming table, do not say that he must give up the social game of cards, as well, to make you happy.

Hard to Pose

If he has come up out of a lower place to your attitude, do not ask him to stand forever upon a pedestal. Let him walk upon the earth among mortals and be satisfied.

In order to think him a good man, do not ask him to be an angel.

Wholesome, normal, sensible, human beings are what we all need to be while on earth, not disembodied spirits.

Clean thoughts, clean habits, clean bodies and happy hearts and faces help to make beautiful lives and homes.

But the too good wife sometimes sees evil where it does not exist, and by suspicion and insinuation ruins her own chances of happiness.

In order to be a good wife, do not be "too good."
